SENATE CLEARS FOR ACTION ON FINNISH LOAN

Administration Reported Favoring Sale of War Goods to Scandinavians.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9—While the senate cleared the way today for action on legislation to make possible a $20,000,000 non-military loan to Finland, the administration was reported considering the sale to Scandinavian countries of surplus arms left over from World war days.

President Roosevelt conferred late yesterday with Secretaries Hull, Woodring and Edison, and the discussions were said to have concerned the advisability of disposing of surplus army and navy guns.

A Norwegian official mission has been inquiring into the possibility of purchasing artillery in the United States. Prince Bertil, son of the Swedish crown prince and head of a Swedish purchasing mission, also has been received by Mr. Roosevelt.

The army has on hand hundreds of field guns and large stores of rifles unusued since the World war.

President Could Act

Officials said that Mr. Roosevelt has the authority to declare the arms surplus material and to be subject to disposal.

Strong support for the Finnish loan legislation was evident in the senate, but leaders said that a final vote might not be reached until next week. The bill, by Senator Brown, (D-Mich.) would double the $100,000,000 capital of the export-import bank.

The bank increase would be financed by the RFC, but economy advocates have contended that if there were any losses on loans, the treasury eventually would have to make them good.

Chairman Pittman (D-Nev.) of the foreign relation committee, which approved the bill, 12 to 6, said there was no doubt in his mind that the senate would give it the same overwhelming indorsement that it placed yesterday on another Finnish aid proposal.

It adopted, 65 to 3, a resolution urging the securities commission to expedite any application which the Finns might make to sell their government's bonds to private investors in this country.

Other Matters Studied

Although the Finnish legislation was the principal subject directly before the senate, both branches of congress were devoting much of their attention to federal economy proposals.

The house approved yesterday a $107,225,660 appropriation for the state, commerce and justice departments—$2,428,350 less than the President's budget estimates.

It also completed legislative action on a $251,822,588 appropriation for emergency national defense measures, accepting without a record vote senate cuts of $12,270,000.

CHAMPION WEIGHS IN AT 203 FOR BATTLE

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis today weighed in at 203 pounds for his 15-round title bout against Arturo Godoy of Chile at Madison Square Garden tonight. The South American challenger weighed 202.

It was the most the Brown Bomber has weighed for a fight in some time. In his last start, against Abe Paster at Detroit last September, he scaled an even 200.

THREATENS ACTION AGAINST EIGHT CITIES

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 9—Nelson Hovey, assistant director of industrial relations, threatened today to take court action against eight Ohio cities he accused of violating a 72-hour week law for city firemen.

Hovey said 84-hour work weeks now were employed in Cincinnati, Toledo, Dayton, Mansfield, Zanesville, Cleveland Heights, East Cleveland and Piqua.

Hovey said that if the cities do not comply within 30 days he would file mandamus actions in the appellate court.

The city of Shaker Heights has created a department; citations for exceeding the 72-hour week law.

Mt. Gilead Pastor One of Original 23 Boy Scout Officials in U. S.

Rev. L. Eugene Rush Made Scoutmaster of Delaware Troop at Organization Meeting 30 Years Ago.

By BOB BYRD

REV. L. EUGENE RUSH, 60-year-old Mt. Gilead minister, is one of five living men who were among the group of 23 that received the first official Boy Scout commissions in the United States.

Consequently, he is participating with more than ordinary interest in events this week marking the thirtieth anniversary of the Boy Scout movement in this country.

Even among the original group of 23 that received the first Boy Scout titles in the United States, Rev. Rush's record probably is unique. Commissioned as a scoutmaster at the country's first Boy Scout organization meeting, he already had been carrying out the Scouting program at least two years, and during part of that time his group of boys even adopted the Scout name.

Original Name "Modified"

Rev. Rush was a Delaware pastor when Scouting came to this country, and had organized a group of boys which, prior to his arrival there, had been known as the East Side Roughnecks. "We toned down the name a little, and called our group the East Side Gang when I went there in 1908," he recalled when interviewed at his home in Mt. Gilead this week.

"At that time, some of the boys in the gang were carrying and selling a magazine edited by W. D. Boyce of Chicago. Mr. Boyce took a trip to England, saw the Scout program in operation there and wrote an article about it for his magazine. Some of the boys noticed it and wanted to change the name of the gang, so we started calling ourselves the East Side Scouts.

"I wrote to Mr. Boyce asking for more particulars about Scouting, and he referred me to scout leaders in England. I wrote to England, but there was no literature available then, so we carried on our troop activities with the meager program obtained in this correspondence.

Meeting in New York

"On Feb. 8, 1910, Mr. Boyce and a group of other men he had interested in the Scout program met in New York City and incorporated the Boy Scouts of America. I learned this development was coming, and immediately wrote and asked that our Delaware troop be included in the original organization. That is how I happened to be among the original list of 23 that got commissions at the first meeting. The list of 23 included every person officially associated with the organization when it was founded, including Dan Beard, who has been commissioner throughout the 30 years of the organization, and J. E. West, who has been the executive officer of the Boy Scouts since the original meeting.

The other men in the group of five now living who were in the original scout group with Rev. Rush are Mr. Beard, whose home is in Suffern, N. Y., Colin H. Livingstone of Washington, D. C., W. D. Michener of LaVerne, Calif., and Mr. West, whose home is in New York.

In 1932, at a banquet in Marion, Rev. Rush received the highest award available to local scout leaders—a silver beaver medal for distinguished service to boyhood. The citation accompanying the award recalled his work with the East Side gang at Delaware.

His Original Book

"We had no Scout handbooks at the start, but in 1911 I received my first one. The boys didn't have any, as mine had to serve the entire troop. I still have the book, although it's pretty well worn by now.

Mrs Gertrude Craig Pasters, 56, wife of Dr. W. F. Pasters died suddenly of a cerebral hemorrhage about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at her home at 257 Superior street. She was found lying on the floor near a davenport in the livingroom by her stepson, John Pasters when he returned home about 5:40 p. m. She had been in her usual health yesterday, the family physician reported.

She was born June 24, 1883, in Hocking county and had lived in Marion since 1889. Her parents were William Craig, a native of Fayette county, and Cynthia Matthews Craig whose birthplace was Athens county. Her marriage to Dr. Pasters took place Sept. 29, 1914.

Mrs. Pasters was active in church and club affairs and served in state and local offices of the King's Daughters and Marion County Federation of Women's clubs. Her church affiliations were with Epworth Methodist church. She was a past county president of the King's Daughters and several years ago served on the state board of trustees of Maplecrest, the state home for girls at Bucyrus. She was a member of the Inasmuch circle. In club work she was one of the oldest members of the Round Table club and served as president in 1920-21. She served on various committees and as chairman in the federation and was elected second vice president of the organization in 1927.

Surviving with the husband, a Marion dentist, and stepson are a sister, Mrs. Frank Phillips of South Prospect street, a brother, Eugene Craig of Minneapolis, Minn., and a niece, Mrs. Paul Huling of Marietta.

725 from Five Counties Attend Farm Session Here

Wyandot, Crawford Men Reelected Credit Corporation Directors; Regional Officer Gives Address.

Eight principles of successful farm financial cooperatives were outlined yesterday by W. F. Gahm, president of the Production Credit Corporation of Louisville, in the principal address at the annual meeting of members of the Marion Production Credit association at the Ohio theater.

Some 725 persons from the five counties represented in the association were on hand for the all-day session. Business included reelection of two directors for three-year terms, M. E. Kear of Wyandot county and H. I. Swalley of Crawford county. These two, together with H. S. Kirkpatrick of Morrow county, Dale C. McElree of Hardin county and A. M. Peters of Marion county, holdover directors, will meet later to elect association officers.

There is one director for each of the five counties in the association and yesterday every county was well represented in the large audience.

The speech by Mr. Gahm came in the afternoon, climaxing a full day of reports and entertainment. The eight points listed by Mr. Gahm for cooperatives to follow:

Service, not profit—The association is an agricultural credit cooperative, organized to serve its members.

Responsible membership — All farmers having a sound basis for credit are eligible.

Cooperative ownership—Every member shares in owning the association by purchasing voting stock in proportion to his borrowings.

Control by members—Each active member has only one vote at association meetings, regardless of the amount of stock he owns.

Members kept informed — A well established program of publicizing the association's activities to the membership is maintained.

No excessive charges.

Adaptation of credit to the needs of the member.

Keeping members' business confidential.

Mr. Gahm presented the Marion association with a framed copy of the eight points.

Loans Reported

Another highlight of the session was the annual financial report made by L. L. Miller, secretary. It showed that during 1939 the association made loans of $745,596. Members paid back $464,201 during the year and at the close of the year there was $464,084 outstanding.

Reserves were built up to $32,609, with the addition of the year's net earnings of $6,392.

It was announced there were 983 voting and investing members, holding $38,860 in association stock, 19.1 per cent of its total capital. The Production Credit corporation owns $165,000 of non-voting stock.

Total assets of the association were listed at $668,308 and included the following:

$6,890 in cash; $459,073 in loans to members; $187,300 in federal farm loan bonds, government bonds and government guaranteed bonds; $15,409 in interest and loans on bonds; $746 in equipment.

Debts were listed at $432,039 of which $431,065 is owed to the intermediate Credit bank for discounting loans and for money borrowed.

Income for 1939 was $34,835 and operating expenses were $26,059. Provision for losses was $2,384 and net earnings were $6,392.

The program yesterday opened at about 10 a. m. and included the following:

Discussion by a group of boys from the Black Swamp Production Credit corporation of Fostoria; violin music by J. A. Muchler of Crawford county; dancing by pupils of Miss Jayne Melby; ventriloquism act by Arthur Craven of Marion; moving pictures; short talk by Dale C. McElree of Hardin county; talk by B. E. Bradford, Hardin county agent; reading of minutes, Mrs. Gertrude Wolfinger of Marion; directors' report, H. I.

LOSSES FAIL TO HALT REDS

Soviet Forces Continue Assault in Karelian Isthmus Despite Reverses.

By The Associated Press

HELSINKI, Feb. 9—Continuation of Russian assaults on the Mannerheim line on the Karelian isthmus despite heavy Red army losses was reported today by the Finnish high command.

In the Summa sector, where Russia claimed her forces had taken eight of 13 Mannerheim line forts captured in the last few days, the Finns said the invaders yesterday were repulsed with "heavy losses" while a number of attacks in the region of Punnumjoki and Panuri were "beaten off, the enemy losing about 700 men and 12 tanks."

Further east on the isthmus, in the Taipale river sector, the army said a battle precipitated by a "powerful attack" by the Russians "still continues."

Northeast of Lake Ladoga—where the Russians said the other five of the 13 captured forts fell to their forces—the army announcement said "heavy fighting continued; the enemy has been repulsed at all points."

"All reports that the Manner-

TRANSIENT DIES IN JAIL AT PROSPECT

Unidentified Man Is Stricken After Given Shelter.

An unidentified transient man about 50 years old was found dead yesterday afternoon in the Prospect jail. The body was discovered about 3:30 p. m. by Marshal Ed Fetter, who called county officials into the investigation.

The man had been given permission to sleep in the jail Wednesday night when he sought shelter, Marshal Fetter reported. He was alive and apparently preparing to leave when the officer went to the jail about 8 a. m. yesterday.

When Marshal Fetter returned in the afternoon he found the transient dead, the body in a seated position on a chair. Death was apparently due to "natural causes," probably a "heart attack,"

WELLES SENT ON WAR TOUR BY PRESIDENT

State Dept. Expert Will Make Personal Study of Conditions in Europe.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9—President Roosevelt announced today he was sending Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, to Europe for a personal survey of conditions in Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain.

Disclosing the move at a press conference, the President said Welles had been instructed to make no proposals or commitments in the name of the United States.

Statements made to him by officials of European governments will be received solely for the President and Secretary Hull, Mr. Roosevelt said.

The President, refusing to elaborate, on his announcement, read the following formal statement to the newspapermen:

"At the request of the President, the undersecretary of state Mr. Sumner Welles will proceed shortly to Europe to visit Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain. This visit is solely for the purpose of advising the President and the secretary of state as to present conditions in Europe.

"Mr. Welles will, of course, be authorized to make no proposals or commitments in the name of the government of the United States.

"Furthermore, the statements made to him by officials of governments will be kept in the strictest confidence and will be communicated by him solely to the President and the secretary of state."

MARION BOY WRECKS STOLEN AUTOMOBILE

Steals Car To Flee Punishment for Theft of $1.

Arrested near Portsmouth where he had driven in a stolen car, a 16-year-old Marion high school youth told officials there last night that he fled from his home city to escape punishment for the theft of $1 from a school locker. He stole the money, he said, to purchase comic magazines and candy.

The Marion youth and a 16-year-old Tiffin hitch-hiker were arrested by Sheriff Earl Brandel of Scioto county last night after the stolen car was wrecked, ending an extensive search in which a dozen southern Ohio officers were participating, according to a news report from Portsmouth.

An auto theft charge was filed against the Marion boy in juvenile court here this morning by Police Chief Marks and officials said that they probably will return the boy to Marion either late this afternoon or tonight.

Arrested After Wreck

The youths were arrested after the stolen car, owned by John L. Waddell of 490 Courtland terrace, was wrecked while speeding away from a filling station where they failed to pay for gasoline. The Tiffin boy was held for investigation at Portsmouth today but officials there said he probably will be released.

Renewing Power of Christianity Cited at Service

Dr. Hastings Delivers Second Sermon in Union Campaign.

"The greatest thing about Christianity is that it is a renewing —a power to become," Dr. J. Warren Hastings of Seattle, Wash., declared last night in the second of his series of union evangelistic campaign sermons at Epworth Methodist church.

Despite icy sidewalks and generally inclement weather, the attendance last night was estimated at several hundred more than the 500 present for the opening service Wednesday night.

Dr. Hastings this morning addressed assemblies of pupils of Harding High school and Central Junior High school and this afternoon he delivered a devotional message at the world day of prayer service at Epworth church.

His sermon last night was on "A Man Against Himself," based on the text, John 3:1-2, "There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews: The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him."

Sympathy for Nicodemus

He said in part:

"I've always had a good deal of sympathy for Nicodemus. He doesn't really come into the focus of this shifting drama very often. In fact, if it were not for the author of the fourth Gospel we should know nothing about him at all. After the third chapter here

100 ORDERED TO QUIT NATION IN 48 HOURS

Plans To Blast Factories and Wreck Trains Reported Discovered.

By The Associated Press

ISTANBUL, Feb. 9—Authoritative sources tonight said government dismissal of 100 German technicians and occupation of the German-owned Krupp shipyards were due to discovery of a far-flung German sabotage plot in the Near East.

Turkish marines occupied the shipyards yesterday; today the government dismissed 100 German technicians employed by the war and naval ministries and gave them 48 hours to quit the country.

Authoritative sources said the government had uncovered evidence of a network of Nazi agents ready to perpetrate explosions, train wrecks and other havoc throughout the Near East on the signal from Berlin.

Under the circumstances, they said, it was impossible to allow the Germans to remain in strategic positions, especially as the technicians were completing work on submarines which Turkey would expect to throw into combat if she became involved in war in the spring.

Turkey's action against Germans came as elsewhere in the Balkans and the Near East steps were being taken to avoid or prepare against any extension of the European conflict.

It was announced that the step was taken under special decree powers voted to the government by the national assembly "for the protection of national defense."

The blanket discharge, coming one day after Turkish seizure of the German-owned Krupp shipyards here, applied to 20 Marine specialists at the Turkish naval base of Gyeldjuk on the sea of Marmora; 20 technicians at a munitions factory near Ankara, and 60 others active in Turkey's military preparations.

Officials said that henceforth no German could work in state-owned industries. This was believed to affect several hundred men in addition to those discharged today.

Sharp Protest Ordered

Reports that Germany's ambassador, Franz Von Papen, had been directed to make a sharp protest against the shipyards confiscation were answered in government circles with the assertion that Turkey was within her legal rights.

Marines continued to occupy the Krupp yards on the Golden Horn, at an inlet of the strategic straits of the Bosphorous, where 30 Germans had been supervising completion of two submarines for the Turkish navy until their sudden ouster yesterday.

Confiscation of other German property in Turkey was expected "sooner or later" in informed circles, which saw the once-strong German influence in Turkey waning since Turkey's alignment with Great Britain and France.

It was learned that hundreds of German experts employed in Turkey would be discharged and sent back to the reich.

Forced liquidation of German enterprises and voluntary withdrawal of many German business men was reported already under way.

TWO DRIVERS FINED IN MORROW COUNTY

Two Columbus Residents Face State Patrol Charges.

Two drivers were arrested by state patrolmen in Morrow county yesterday afternoon, one on a charge of reckless driving and the other on a charge of driving an overloaded truck.

Mrs. Mabel Cron, 41, of Columbus was arrested on the reckless driving charge after she allegedly passed an automobile on a hill on Route 42 south of Mt. Gilead and forced a patrol cruiser, traveling in the opposite direction, to swing off the highway into a ditch.

She pleaded guilty before Mayor Frank Alga of Cardington and was fined $10 and costs.

State Patrolmen T. B. Morgan and W. C. Corder of Marion, who made the arrest, said that they were chasing another automobile which a short time before had crashed a stop sign when the Cron car forced the patrol cruiser off the road. The officers then gave up the first chase and started pursuing the Cron car, making the arrest a few minutes later, they reported.

Earlier in the afternoon the same officers arrested Dale Shroyer, 19, of Columbus at Cardington on a charge of driving an overloaded truck. He pleaded guilty before Mayor Alga and was fined $25 and costs of which $15 was suspended. The patrolmen said that the truck, loaded with potatoes, was overloaded approximately 1,500 pounds.

WHEAT HITS BEST PRICE IN 2 WEEKS

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 — Wheat prices advanced a cent a bushel today to the best level in more than two weeks but then backed down, giving up all the session's gains.

Improved demand for cash wheat aided the early upturn while profit-taking encouraged by the fact that prices were about 5 cents above last week's lows accelerated the reaction. Some attention was attracted by Washington reports of diplomatic moves which many traders regarded as encouraging peace prospects but these were offset by news of strained international relations in the Near East.

Wheat closed ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher compared with yesterday's finish, May 90⅝-¾, July 87-87⅛; corn ¼-½ down, May 56⅜-¼, July 56¼; oats ¼-⅝ lower.

STOCKS SHAKE SELLING URGE

Market Resumes Climb Upward After Feeling Early Pressure.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 9 — Profit takers battered the stock market for a while today but eventually were shaken off and leaders resumed the climb started Thursday.

Gains of fractions to 2 points at a fast opening soon were cut down or eliminated. Dealings slowed on the setback and prices steadied. Buying then began to come into the aircrafts and had seeped into virtually all departments near the fourth hour, with prices around the best of the day.

Although many in Wall Street thought yesterday's rally was largely of a technical nature, the idea seemed to be growing that business was not as bad as many had looked for. Hopes of larger foreign purchasing of goods in this country, combined with a little more optimism regarding the national political picture, served as speculative ammunition.

Selective demand for bonds appeared. Foreign markets were without particular trend. Commodities did better.

New tops for the year or longer were posted for Loft, Atlas Powder and International Paper preferred.

Favored stocks were Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Sperry, Curtiss-Wright, Lockheed, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Great Northern, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, International Harvester, Johns-Manville and Union Carbide.

4 ANSWER ALTAR CALL AT HOLINESS CHURCH REVIVAL

Four persons were at the altar for prayer last night at First Pilgrim Holiness church following a sermon by Rev. Alvin Young, evangelist, on "Be Not Deceived."

He said: "Be not deceived in God's attitude toward sin. God will punish sin. Be not deceived relatives to a Judgment to come. Some teach that God is keeping no books. The Bible says He is. Be not deceived relative to the need of making wrongs right with our fellowmen. Be not deceived in reference to Bible doctrine."

Tonight at 7:30 Rev. Young will preach on "The Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost."

Boston Wool

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Feb. 9—Domestic wools were receiving very little attention in the Boston market today. The price situation remained unsettled because of the lack of demands. Low cross-bred South American wools were fairly active and prices were showing a strengthening tendency on a demand from Canada. Wool tops were very quiet in Boston and deliveries on old orders were showing a decline.

Still Going Strong

By The Associated Press

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev.—It was back in the last century that the Comstock Lode dazzled the country with its rich production of gold and silver—but there's wealth in the old hills yet. Enough ore is being produced to keep eight mills running, and mining men say the monthly yield may conservatively be set at $200,000.

Contests for May 14 Primary Take Form As Deadline for Filing Nears

No Candidates in Field Yet for Offices of Congressman Common Pleas Judge or Coroner.

With the filing date for the May 14 primary elections little more than a month away, a check-up today showed that several races have already shaped up while for some elective offices there seems to be little or no interest.

Altogether the Republicans and Democrats are to nominate candidates for 12 county and three district offices. The primaries will also be the time for electing Republican and Democratic committeemen for each of the 57 precincts in the county and an Eighth district member of the state central committee of each party.

At present the contests already assured are for the Republican nominations for the two county commissioner posts, sheriff, engineer, recorder, representative and prosecutor. Democratic races are already set for the commissioner jobs, sheriff and treasurer. Thus far no one has put in a bid for common pleas judge nomination or for coroner on either ticket.

None in Congress Race

Neither has any one mentioned his desire to be a congressman from the Eighth district, at least not to the public, Dr. Frederick C. Smith, Marion Republican, now holds the position. The district includes Marion, Morrow, Crawford, Wyandot Hardin and Hancock counties.

David A. Liggitt of Belle Center, Republican, has announced he will seek reelection as state senator from the 13th-31st district which includes Marion, Crawford, Wyandot, Union, Hardin, Logan and Seneca counties. R. B. Ackerman, Gallon Democrat, has also announced.

Only Phil M. Crow, Kenton Democrat, is so far in the race for the Third district appellate court position to be filled. Judge Crow now holds the job.

No one has appeared for the Eighth district membership on the state central committees, now held by Bud Lawson (R) of Marion and M. A. McMahon (D) of Kenton.

Only a half-dozen or so candidates have filed for precinct committee positions.

In summary form, the lineup of announced county candidates to date follows:

Office	Republican	Democrat
Commissioner (2)	8	5
Sheriff	7	7
Engineer	2	0
Common Pleas	0	0
Probate	0	1
Clerk	1	1
Recorder	3	1
Representative	2	1
Coroner	0	0
Prosecutor	3	0
Treasurer	1	2
Totals	27	18

The number of candidates is expected to rise sharply before the filing deadline on March 15. Prospective candidates are known to be circulating petitions for common pleas and probate judge and for some of the other offices.

The candidates nominated in the primaries may not be the only ones who will appear on the November ballots however. The law provides that persons may become a candidate for almost any office by filing at the election board by early September a nominating petition bearing names equal to at least one per cent of the persons who voted in the last gubernatorial election in the county or district. Candidates so nominated must run on the independent ticket, however, and hence face heavily unfavorable odds.

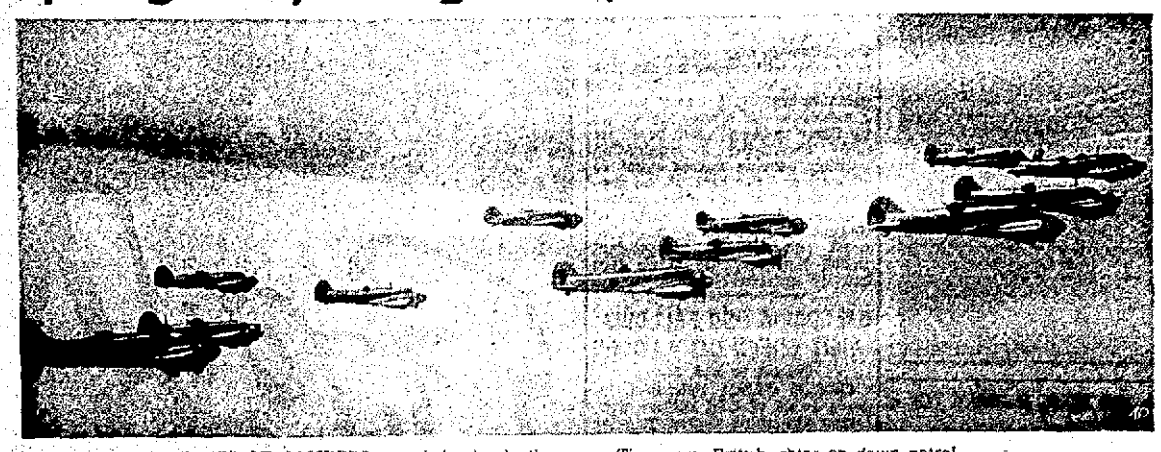
Spring May Bring Europe Showers of Bombs



WAVES OF BOMBERS may help decide the war. These are British ships on dawn patrol.

Many signs point to the probability of an Allied-German "war in earnest" in the spring. The character of modern land and the sea warfare is well established. That of air warfare is still in flux. The Associated Press's Aviation Editor here discusses what a large-scale war in the air would be like.

By DEVON FRANCIS
Associated Press Aviation Editor

NEW YORK—The creation of air fleets having striking similarity to surface navies promises a kind of air warfare in Europe—if big air offensives actually are launched in 1940—that will stir the shades of yesteryear's flying aces.

Bombing raids by hundreds of planes operating in "waves" are more than a specter of the future. They are possible, even probable, now. Both sides in Europe's "big war" have built up tremendous air forces. The almost static nature of the air war since last September, the German campaign in Poland excepted, is an unnatural lull before a storm, in the opinion of many competent neutral military men.

New Combat Arm

In the whole of that war only 1,400 persons lost their lives in England from Zeppelin and airplane raids.

Today, air forces consist of bombing planes, comparable in function with battleships and possessing a striking power far beyond that of the lumbering bombers of 1918, and of swarms of smaller craft which, like those on the sea, have supporting missions.

A wholly new type of warplane, the bomber destroyer, has come out of the aeronautical laboratories. Armed with small cannon, it is designed to attack and shoot down invading bombers.

Another new type, glimpsed briefly in the German blitzkrieg in Poland and again during the December 18 defense of Heligoland against British bombers, is the bi-motored pursuit or fighting single-seater. The United States army also is experimenting with this type of weapon.

Must Be Protected

Squadrons of long-range pursuit planes to accompany bombing missions are being built up by both the Allies and the Germans, on the theory—borne out by losses in the abortive raids up to date—that bombers to be effective must have protection against defending pursuits.

Finally, Germany and, possibly, her adversaries are constructing four-motored, long-range bombers to reach objectives more than 1,000 miles from their home bases.

The aim of all warfare is to break an enemy's will to resist, and to be as economical as possible of blood and money in the process.

One school of thought contends that to defend on land and attack in the air is the quickest avenue to a final decision.

Air War In Spring

The stalemate on the Western Front, where armies are living comfortably in huge fixed fortifications, lends credence to talk that a spring offensive would be confined to air and sea warfare.

Germany was in a fair way of winning the war of 1914-18 with her unrestricted submarine attacks in 1917. Germany's counter-blockade of England was having a deadly effect. Air warfare on a 1940 scale might logically have as its objectives the destruction of factories producing vital war materials, roads and railways, nerve centers of electrical, gas and water supply services, wharves and, last but not least, enemy airdromes.

Air superiority, which would be necessary to victory in the air, would depend on neutralizing the effectiveness of the enemy's air force. It is an air force axiom that the best place to bag the eagle is in his nest.

To Smash Morale

Air attacks during the world war were made to destroy British morale. Today, both sides would have the same objectives.

To be economical of both men and materials, the belligerents would choose their bombing targets carefully. Visibility, depending on weather, would be a major factor—unless navigational bombing, in which bombers would fly at great heights out of sight of the ground, were attempted.

Waves of bombers, loosed at intervals of an hour, probably would be preceded by swarms of pursuit or ground-strafing attack planes to draw the fire of defending aircraft. The bombers themselves, approaching at great altitude and gliding down with motors silenced to thwart elaborate "warning nets," would drop demolition, fragmentation or incendiary bombs, depending on the nature of the attack and the character of the targets.

Just what effect such attacks would have is perhaps the biggest question facing the high commands of both sides to the conflict. Certainly a mass bombing raid by either belligerent would be repaid in kind, and immediately. And just as certainly, the destruction in lives and property would be enormous, regardless of what air defense measures were taken.

SITE IS CHOSEN FOR HOSPITAL

Galion To Build on Tract Donated to City by Boyd Brothers.

Special to The Star

GALION, Feb. 9 — The site for the new Galion city hospital, was selected Thursday night by the hospital advisory committee and Mayor W. M. King.

The site is a gift from the Boyd brothers, Ralph E. and J. S. Boyd, and is a plot of ground adjacent to the rear of the Ralph E. Boyd estate, formerly occupied by his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Boyd. It is a rolling piece of ground on the north side of Westwood street, a street running parallel to and between Cherry street and Grove avenue. The east boundary will almost reach Clymer avenue, while the South State road runs along the west side of the site. The plot is approximately 700 feet long by 230 feet wide.

Several sites were considered by the committee and Mayor King, and the one chosen was the only one large enough on the donated list.

Tentative selection of an architect was also made at last night's meeting, and the committee will meet with him tonight to go over plans. An appropriation of $200 was made by city council, Tuesday night, to be used if necessary for the employment of an architect to draw up tentative plans.

City officials expect government aid in building the hospital. They also have available the $55,000 bond issue passed by citizens of Galion at the last November election, besides the sum of $15,000 which the Good Samaritan hospital board has on hand for this purpose.

OPEN HOUSE PLANNED AT CENTRAL COMMUNITY HALL

Community night will be observed at the Central Community hall at Church and High streets Tuesday night. Open house will be held. A tour of the building at 7 p. m. will open the program. Each person will be given an opportunity to make a small souvenir in the wood shop, and entertainment will include folk dancing, motion pictures, active and quiet games for both adults and children. A handicraft display with all types of crafts sponsored by the center, on exhibition will be a feature.

Wisconsin Takes Spotlight As Testing Ground for Presidential Aspirants

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 — Wisconsin came to the forefront today as a potential Roosevelt-Garner testing ground and eclipsed even Illinois as a probable gauge of strength of presidential material in both parties.

The action of the Democratic party organization of Wisconsin in filing President Roosevelt's name along with a partial slate of delegates yesterday made it appear almost certain that Wisconsin would be one of the first states to consider the third term issue in a presidential primary. Delegates for Vice President Garner were entered last week.

Under Wisconsin law, the President does not have to announce whether he is a candidate, and unless he specifically objects, his name might be carried on the April 2 ballot without his intentions having become known.

In Illinois, Garner backers were at work in a drive which, it was reported, may culminate in filing petitions to put his name on the Democratic ballot for the April 9 primary. Garner declined comment.

Midnight is the deadline for entering names in the Illinois balloting, which does not bind delegates. Democratic organization leaders in the state already have entered Mr. Roosevelt in the race.

Thomas E. Dewey of New York has filed in Illinois on the Republican ticket, and last night challenged other aspirants in the party to run against him.

It appeared, however, that Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York would be his only opponent.

The Wisconsin primary appeared to promise a much more extensive test of the strength of Republican presidential aspirants.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) said he would wait until after a Republican state meeting in Wisconsin on Feb. 18 to determine whether he would put a slate of delegates in the field. Friends of Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) already have entered a slate, as have friends of Dewey.

WRIST INJURED IN FALL

Miss Audrey Miller of 229 Chase street suffered a fracture of her left wrist when she fell on the icy pavement on Hughes court last night.

Aviation Boosters Club Prepares for Series of Special Activities

Pig Roast, Air Show and Port Beautification Project Plans Discussed at Meeting.

Three major events on the program of the Marion Aviation Boosters club were discussed Thursday night at a meeting of 27 of the members at the central community house.

First on the schedule is the second annual pig roast which will be held next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the Triangle grill. The committee in charge reported advance ticket sales indicate some 75 or 80 persons from Marion and nearby communities will attend. Frank Estill of Cincinnati, regional inspector for the civil aeronautics authority, and a veteran pilot from World war days, will speak.

Members who do not have tickets may obtain them the night of the roast.

Name Air Show Committee

Next on the list was the air show which is planned jointly by the Boosters club and Junior Chamber of Commerce for June 16 at the Marion airport. Last night the Boosters club committee was named and includes Glen Winters, Harold Dickerson, Alvin Freeman, Clarence Fisher and John Braham. Mr. Freeman, who has had considerable experience in "aerobatics," is expected to be on the stunt program for the show.

The Boosters club committee will meet with the Jaycee fireman committee Tuesday night in connection with the pig roast.

The third project discussed was improvement of the airport. It was decided to landscape the area between the hangar and the roadway with grass and shrubbery this spring and also to erect airport boundary markers. The markers will be placed at corners of the field an will have arms pointing along the boundary lines. They will be large enough to be easily visible from the air.

Safety Measure Planned

Dee Woods, club president, explained they are a safety measure, chiefly for the convenience of pilots unfamiliar with the Marion port. Several times in the past visiting fliers have come close to landing in nearby cultivated fields or on rough spots where they might easily have cracked up.

Four new members were admitted last night: H. H. Clark of Waples avenue, Sonny Copeland of East Church street, J. Nixon of the Lido apartments and Dale Hughes of Patten street.

Y., formerly of Galion, to Mary Clare Brackett of Grosse Pointe, Mich. The ceremony took place Dec. 2, 1939, in the chapel of St. James Protestant Episcopal church.

REVIVAL OF OLD GUILDS PROPOSED BY CATHOLICS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9—Sixteen Catholic archbishops and bishops, seeking to improve America's social order, proposed today that men with like interests band themselves into vocational groups akin to the guilds of the middle ages.

They advanced the idea—not with details of any fixed course for achieving it—but as founded on Catholic doctrine, "to abolish conflict between classes with divergent interests."

Declaring that "man is not an isolated individual living in a social vacuum," they proposed reestablishment of "some form of guild or vocational groups which will bind men together in society according to their respective occupations, thus creating moral unity."

VESUVIUS NOW POWER SOURCE

Scientist Rates Volcano as Great Natural Asset to Italy.

By International News Service

NAPLES, Italy—"Vesuvius embodies Italy's greatest single source of natural power."

This is the opinion of Professor Enzo Carlevaro, University of Naples, physicist and authority on volcanoes, who revealed today that Italian scientists and engineers have for some time been seeking means of harnessing Vesuvian energy to produce cheap heat and electricity for the 1,500,000 people who live in the Naples area.

Italian engineers have already scored a spectacular success at Larderello, in northern Italy, where they have harnessed 286 natural steam wells to produce 1,200,000 kilowatt hours of electricity daily.

At Larderello and other places where natural volcanic power has been utilized, however, the engineers have dealt with inactive volcanoes. Vesuvius, spurting fire and molten lava almost incessantly presents new problems which must be solved before its natural power can be tapped. These problems are concerned with keeping the volcano under control.

Professor Carlevaro reveals that three projects have been suggested and studied. The first of these contemplates placing a huge kettle to boil on top of the active fires of the volcano. This has been considered impractical because of the constant shifting of the cone and the possibility that a sudden eruption would demolish all the equipment set up to carry off the steam power generated.

The second project involves tunneling into the mountain near its base to a point where from a part of the tremendous heat inside Vesuvius might be released and converted into power.

The accomplishment of this project involves the outlay of millions in men, money and machines, but it might be attempted if scientists and engineers can establish that it is possible to excavate against the unknown pressure within the volcano without incurring the danger of having it suddenly burst through and cause a major catastrophe.

The third and, according to Professor Carlevaro, most practical idea is to use the heat emanating from the natural fissurees in the lava fields near the summit of the volcano. The equipment necessary to collect this heat while costly is nowhere near as expensive as that needed for tunneling operations and, in the event "tourists won't even notice the scenic wonders to a practical national asset is in the offing," says Professor Carlevaro and adds, its replacement would be possible, say engineers, without undue expense or loss of time.

Big Brother Act Flops

FINNS had reason to shiver with something besides climate when Russia threatened to call on Germany for help. The difference between Soviet and Nazi fighting ability is approximately that between a housefly and an eagle.

It was pointed out at the time, however, that the reds were going out on a limb. By promising to call in big, brownbrother to finish what little pink brother had started, they put themselves on a spot.

That is what has happened. Germany declares no military agreement exists with Russia, other than the non-aggression pact of last August. It is giving no technical aid or military aid to Russia and expects to give none. While this may not be strictly true (nothing governments say in wartime ever is strictly true if there's anything to be gained by fibbing) it must be comforting to the Finns. Next time the reds threaten to call in the marines they'll get what they deserved the last time—the Finnish version of a Bronx cheer.

For the Cotton Surplus

WITH a surplus of nearly 14,000,000 bales of cotton (a bale weighs approximately 500 lbs.) the United States is thinking up ways and means of getting rid of cotton. Experiments with road surfacing, for instance, have been getting attention.

Newest idea, announced proudly by the department of agriculture, is to include cotton in the surplus commodities plan. Relief beneficiaries will pay a dollar for a stamp good for purchase of cotton fabric, get another stamp for the same purpose free, and presto more cotton will be consumed.

These are serious measures for a serious problem. Probably no one has thought of converting cotton into ear plugs and selling them for what the consumer will be willing to pay. There are times when a good set of ear plugs would be worth their weight in gold. The impression may be wrong but has anyone else noticed that the times are coming closer together than they used to come?

Revised Version

YOU never miss the water till the well runs dry—

As long as water comes out of faucets, no medals will be pinned on David C. Warner, executive secretary of Ohio water conservation board. The board has disintegrated. Mr. Warner's dusty office in the statehouse has received no appropriation for five years. Mr. Warner, himself, realizes he's bucking a hopeless job, according to a recent interview, but at the age of 67 he's not going to give up.

His warning to Ohio is brief. The water table is falling all over the state. In from three to 10 years there will be an acute shortage in many communities. Industries will begin to move away. Ultimately, there will be a desert—unless something is done. It isn't clear what Mr. Warner, who has been studying water for 40 years, thinks should be done, but whatever it is, he's promoting it at his own expense.

If water ceased to come out of faucets some morning he probably could command a million dollars—just like that!

Lending Business

STOCKHOLDERS in the Export-Import bank are the citizens of the United States. The bank lends their money.

If it lends $100,000 to China and Finland, which is contemplated in approval by the senate foreign relations committee of a bill to expand its capital by that amount, the stockholders have a right to wonder how the money's going to be paid back. They also have a right to wonder why, if the government doesn't expect the money to be paid back, which seems to be the case, it's called a loan and not a subsidy to help China and Finland prosecute wars against countries with which the United States is not at war.

One Guess

WHETHER he likes it or not, Joe American is profiting from the war boom. The family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., which has studied family buying power for seven years, says Joe's advantages in this respect increased faster in the last quarter of 1939 than at any time since pre-depression days.

Expansion of U. S. industries that supply war materials is chiefly responsible, the bureau finds. While most peacetime enterprises were improving less than 10 per cent in 1939, those affected by war business were improving up to 50 per cent. "Expansion of industries which supply war materials is so much greater than that of practically all the strictly 'peacetime' businesses that it sticks up like a peak, down whose slopes roll the effects of greatly expanded purchasing power to other industries and their workers," the report says.

And does Joe like it? One guess is enough. That is, always has been, the fatal thing about war booms.

News Behind the News

Various New Deal Attempts To Solve Labor Board Troubles Meet with Failure.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9—An administration agent whose face is familiar around the White House has sought to solve national labor relations board troubles in a new way.

He is known to have approached boardman Edwin S. Smith with the suggestion that Mr. Smith could open the way for solving the labor policy predicament by resigning. Unfortunately, Mr. Smith said no.

Another effort was made to line up Smith and his board colleague, J. Warren Madden, for the release of Nathan Witt, secretary and pink thorn in the board. This suggestion was likewise rejected.

Paul Mallon

The White House strategists thought they could get away from corrective legislation by changing the personnel. As this escape has been blocked none has an idea what to do next.

They may let the house investigation go unimpeded to the point of producing drastic amendments to alter board policy. Rumors at the Capitol have suggested the New Dealers would stop promoting their own mild amendments in the house (Norton) labor committee, if the investigating committee would harness its energies and maintain a more sympathetic attitude. After all, Democrats, right or left, do not want to give Republicans too much campaign ammunition.

Self Investigation?

The national economic committee may have to investigate itself next. The press was unable to find out about committee decisions in executive sessions, but received tips from bankers in New York concerning committee action and confirmed these later from committee members. One committeeman, Senator William King, brought the matter up in later executive sessions demanding that the banker pipeline be closed. It will be.

Third Term Try Unlikely

Signs flashing daily across the front pages point to a third term—but those nearest Mr. Roosevelt here still refuse emphatically to believe them.

His political manager, Jim Farley, told every one in private at the Democratic conclave he did not think the President would make the attempt. His vice president, Mr. Garner, has practically announced he does not believe what he sees. While these two are candidates themselves their disbelief is shared widely and loftily.

The President's current closest friend in congress, Senator Jim Byrnes of South Carolina, privately says the President will not run. So does Senator Wagner, perhaps the closest socializing New Dealer to the White House.

When you add up the undeniable indications that the Mesdames Roosevelt, mother and wife, are against four years more, and one of the Roosevelt sons has publicly stated he did not believe his father would run, you have a conclusion which is amazingly at variance with the announced thought of the Democratic national committee. The explanation is that local politicians and officeholders are clamoring because their futures hang upon the President's coat tails. Furthermore, it has become a sort of polite custom among Roosevelt advocates to issue third term statements as a personal compliment to Roosevelt.

Careful political observers, however, will string along with Wagner, Byrnes, Farley, Garner, and the family.

Demonstrative Protest

SEC Chairman Jerome Frank staged a hair tearing act in the national economic committee in protest against the decision allowing insurance companies and investment bankers to present charges that they were maltreated by Frank's SEC during the inquiry. As one committeeman described it, no doubt facetiously:

"Mr. Frank amazed us when he leaped upon the table and we thought he was going to swing from the chandelier."

Apparently he should have. The committee decided to hear the bankers and insurance charges anyway.

Confucius Really Said—

Arthur Brisbane Article Tells of Chinese Philosopher.

The "Confucius Say" fad is sweeping the country, mostly in a facetious way. Although this is not viewed seriously by the general public, there is naturally widespread interest in the Chinese philosopher and his thousands of wise sayings. For that reason this article, written by the late Arthur Brisbane, noted newspaper columnist, will be of interest. Parts of the article, written by Mr. Brisbane about a year before his death, is printed herewith.

* * *

THE world watches the slow swallowing of China by Japan, like the swallowing of an antelope by a boa constrictor, of much smaller girth.

Those that know China's history will sympathize with Japan rather than with China. If Japan swallows China, Japan will become Chinese, as the barbarians that invaded Rome remained to become Roman and then Italian. And China is not easily swallowed.

She has been conquered often, but always emerges, still China.

With so much talk of China, it may please you to consider processes of the Chinese intellect as revealed in the writing of Confucius, greatest Chinese of them all.

You might read H. A. Giles' "History of Chinese Literature," published by Appleton & Company; "Chinese Proverbs," by William Scarborough; "The Wisdom of the Chinese," by Brian Brown, or "Chinese Classics," translated by Prof. James Legge.

Of the Chinese, without exaggeration, Sir Robert Hart says, "They are well-behaved, law-abiding, intelligent, economical and industrious; they can learn anything and do anything; they are punctiliously polite; they worship talent, and they believe in right so firmly that they scorn to think it requires to be supported or be enforced by might."

Japan may change that view, although Jenghis Khan and other great conquerors could not do it.

Reading a few lines from calm old Confucius and others, you remember that Chinese literature and philosophy were old when Hammurabi was making laws for the young city of Babylon long before the city of Rome had been founded.

Chinese philosophers were developing their theories long before Socrates, Plato, Aristotle or the great ones of the West.

Chinese wisdom is expressed in short, abrupt sayings, proverbs, maxims, sometimes distasteful to Western thought.

FOR instance, from Confucius:

"The higher type of man seeks all that he wants in himself; the inferior man seeks all that he wants from others.

"The princely man is one who knows neither grief nor fear."

That princely type is uncommon; perhaps Mussolini would answer the description, although his methods would amaze Confucius.

Confucius emphasized nine points of behavior, some of which might surprise a good Rotarian.

"To hear distinctly, be kindly in looks, respectful in demeanor, conscientious in speech, earnest in affairs; in doubt, careful to inquire; in anger, thinking of the consequences; when offered an opportunity for gain, thinking only of his duty."

His five important qualities are: "Self-respect, magnanimity, sincerity, earnestness, benevolence." "Show self-respect, and others will respect you. Be magnanimous, and you will win all hearts, etc."

CONFUCIUS put righteousness before courage.

"The man of high station who has courage without righteousness is a menace to the State; the common man who has courage without righteousness is nothing more than a brigand."

Confucius says:

"The nobler sort of man" hates "those whose courage is unaccompanied by self-restraint; those who are audacious, but narrow-minded."

He wanted the wise man in his conversation to have no "shalls," no "musts," no "ifs."

HE divides his own life into six ages, not into Shakespeare's seven.

"At 15 my mind was bent on learning. At 30 I stood firm. At 40 I was free from delusions. At 50 I understood the laws of Providence. At 60 my ears were attentive to the truth. At 70 I could follow the promptings of my heart without overstepping the mean."

Confucius would not teach everybody:

"If after being shown one corner of a subject a man cannot go on to discover the other three, I do not repeat the lesson."

This is Confucius, definition of true knowledge:

"When you know, to know that you know, and when you do not know, to know that you do not know—that is true knowledge."

About ambition, the desire for fame, Confucius said:

"Instead of being concerned because you are not known, seek to be worthy of being known."

WHEN a student told him he always thought three times before he acted, Confucius said "twice would do." "Not too much, not too little," written above the old Greek temple door, was part of Confucius' philosophy long before the Greek wise man thought of it.

China concentrates on ancestor worship. Questioned about men's duty to the spirits, Confucius replied:

"Before we are able to do our duty by the living, how can we do it by the spirits of the dead?"

Asked about death, Confucius replied:

"Before we know what life is, how can we know what death is?"

Modern science confesses its ignorance as to what life is. See Dr Carrel's new book: "Man the Unknown."

Confucius advises us to "require much from ourselves and little from others." Some parents have children that need that advice.

"Only two classes of men never change: The wisest of the wise, and the dullest of the dull."

THESE quotations may bore some readers, but they need not read, and they may inspire some of the young to write down day by day their own thoughts and philosophical musings, which would be beneficial. To learn to think, learn to express thought.

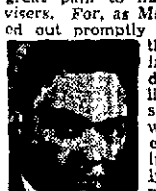
Fault Found with President's Statement Regarding Public Debt Situation.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

IF MR. ROOSEVELT has been correctly reported as saying that state, county and city indebtedness has decreased in direct ratio to the increase in the federal debt, he must have caused great pain to his economic advisers. For, as Mr. Dewey pointed out promptly and effectively, the total local indebtedness has decreased very little in the last seven years, whereas the federal debt has increased greatly. The statement attributed to Mr. Roosevelt is just not so, and, if he made the statement, he must have misunderstood what his advisers told him.



Walter Lippmann

What almost certainly they must have told him is that in the '20s local debt was increasing rapidly, whereas federal debt was declining; in the '30s, on the other hand, local debt has been stationary and slightly declining, while federal debt has been increasing. The '20s were a period of federal retrenchment and local expansion; in the '30s practically the whole expansion of government activity was financed by the federal government. In the '20s the extravagance was local, and in the '30s it has been federal. Thus a considerable part of the increased federal debt replaces what would have been an increase of local debt.

The President's advisers probably told him that another part of the increase of the federal debt replaces some of the increase of private indebtedness in the '20s. As Mr. Dewey pointed out, private indebtedness has fallen some $17,-500,000,000 since 1932; for a good many of these billions of private debt there has been substituted federal debt.

Financing in the '20s

The prosperity of the '20s was financed by a great increase of public and private indebtedness; that is to say, by public loans to states, counties and cities, by private loans to farmers and home owners and builders, by loans to corporations, by installment credit and by foreign loans. The great depression stopped all this financing. It has never been resumed on anything like the scale of the '20s. Such recovery as we have had has been financed, not by local and private borrowing, but by federal and public borrowing.

The question which the New Dealers have to answer is why this federal financing has not brought a full recovery. The question which their opponents have to answer is whether in the absence of federal financing, there would have been enough local and private financing to cause a full recovery.

The great point for everybody is that in both periods there was an increase of indebtedness. The local and private debts of the '20s led through prosperity to a crash. The federal and public debts of the '30s have given us a partial and an uncertain and unsatisfactory recovery. The problem is whether the country can achieve a genuine recovery without the private credit inflation of the '20s and without the federal credit inflation of the '30s. For there has been no prosperity in the post-war era which was not accompanied by, and was not dependent upon, a great increase in debt of one kind or another.

Unstabilized Since War

The post-war world was never stabilized at a satisfactory level by the mere exchange of goods and services and the investment of savings. There have been so many barriers to normal commerce and so many deterrents to genuine investment that throughout the period prosperity has had to be sustained artificially by credit inflation. This was done in the '20s by bankers, promoters, corporations, and local governments. In the '30s it has been done by federal action. But never since the other war has the economic system been made to work without pumping into it inflationary credit of one kind or another.

Mr. Roosevelt throws no light on the real problem by showing how much better off we are now than we were after the crash which ended the '20s. His Republican opponents throw no light on the real problem by denouncing the prosperity of the New Deal and carefully ignoring how their own prosperity ended in a crash. A debate of this sort merely justifies the way who has been going around Washington telling people that the Republicans have shown they could produce a depression which was too big for the Democrats to cure.

The question which needs to be examined is why in the whole post-war period, under Republicans and Democrats alike, prosperity and a satisfactory level of employment have required a large amount, in one form or another, of credit inflation. The answer to that question is not easy to give. But an honest effort to find the answer in the great structural dislocations and disorders of our era will induce a certain humility, and make the pot less ready to call the kettle black.

Good Morning!

Who Says It's Good? What's Dandy About Having To Get Up How Long Is It Till Breakfast?

By DAMON RUNYON

WE HAVE a note from a lady who says appreciates our recent advice to about keeping tension out of the home in interest of marital happiness. She says wishes, however, that we would speak to husbands on the matter of displaying a cheerfulness and kindness toward their before leaving the house and especially on getting up in the morning.

Damon Run

We take it the lady has in mind that brief interval between the time the husband rolls out of the hay and the moment of his coffee. This period may be anywhere from 10 minutes to an hour, the length depending largely upon how much time the husband has to get to his work and his attitude toward cleanliness and attire. Some husbands can array themselves for public appearance with the speed of a fireman responding to a midnight alarm. Others are leisurely.

WE AGREE the husband should be ful on leaving the house. He should stow upon his wife a fond kiss, even th it misses her mouth and lands on her ear, should leave her with a bright word.

When a husband first awakens, by a clock, or clarion call of the good wife, he few minutes in which to lie there and re on the two cardinal injustices of life that flict him—the first being the injustice of ing to arise at all, the second the injustice having to go to work after arising.

Why, he reflects bitterly, is he the v of these injustices? Because, as he tells self lying there in bed, he has to make a ing for his wife. And what does she do him in return? Nothing. At least no that he can think of at that particular ment. What a sucker he was to get mar he tells himself.

By the time he gets through thinking o cruelties he is suffering, he is in a sour m indeed, and it turns sourer when he unr himself from the covers and feels the air that has seeped through the window open all night in the interests of his phy well-being. Why should he try to keep he wonders? For what?

HIS MOOD becomes practically curdled he fumbles on the floor with his fee his slippers and discovers that one has countably crept away back in under the during the night. He starts talking to hi when he finds that the sleeves of his bat are turned inside out, and he had to re the garment and readjust it.

The injustices of life continue to mou his mind when he goes into the bathroom finds the water is not hot and that he out of razor blades. If perchance he cuts self while shaving, his mood becomes th a dynamiter.

If he is unable to find a shirt that suit taste, or is unable to knot his necktie the try, his mind totters dangerously on the of complete disaster. A man can stand so much before breakfast.

Still, everything would be all right if generally understood the peculiar priv of a husband in this period we are ta about. All they have to do is to keep o his sight until that comforting gurgling from the breakfast room tells them tha husband is downing his java.

ONE OF the major disorders in marita lations is the fact wives decline to gi that little period of time that should be lowed to man and his mood. They ins putting themselves in the way of the hu soon after he quits the arms of Mor and before he has had his matutinal re ments.

First thing you know a rage preva both sides that no amount of coffee ca suage and it winds up with slamming front door. We agree with our lady spondent that a short morning unkin often lingers in a wife's mind all day, b insist it is only because the wife trespass a period that must forever be sacred t husband.

New Printing Ink Test

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

CINCINNATI—Since the birth of the p press, in 1471, the quality of ink has been with the human finger tip.

The finger-tip test possibly goes back e the time when the Chinese originated printing with blocks.

Now a machine has replaced this, one of the oldest of human skills. The new device is the inkomet veloped by Prof. Robert F. Reed, resear rector of the institute of scientific re University of Cincinnati.

For good printing, two qualities are re of ink. One is called tack. It means stic or cohesiveness. If tack is too great, mo wasted on the extra power required to tu ink-distributing rollers. Or the ink may injure the surface of the printed paper.

The other quality is length. This is the bility of the ink for drawing into long t Experts guessed both by the gentle pull the finger up withdrawn from a touch

The new inkometer is a pair of rollers surfaces inked, rotating with faces in c One roller is fixed. The other is free to bit under pull of the ink. A pendulum at to this free roller measures exactly th of the ink.

It is claimed that the machine is no better than the finger test, but that it what no finger ever could, namely, m tack and length of ink while being sq between moving rollers. This is importan speed may change the qualities.

Frenchmen Mix Life of Soldier and Monk in Holding Maginot Line

By TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Paris Correspondent

PARIS, Feb. 9—Wartime life [illegible] garrisons of France's Maginot line is a strange mixture of the monkish and the military, with monotony as a concomitant and daylight a rarity worthy of exclamation.

Secluded in the subterranean depths of the great fortresses all they know of the war is what they read in the papers, usually two days old.

Taylor Henry

In their artificially-lighted chambers, the soldiers know no distinction between day and night, fair weather and foul. When they go into the line they go to stay, cut off from the world above except for 10-day leaves every four months.

Unlike their comrades above ground, they have no chance to visit neighboring villages and pay court to the girls. It would not do them much good, anyway, for most of the villages near the line have been cleared of civilians.

Because the line's big guns must be manned 24 hours a day, the self-styled "shellfish" troops may eat breakfast at nightfall and dine heartily on soup, meat, potatoes and wine in the early morning.

Each man sleeps eight hours a day, but in the chill of winter he kicks off the covers, and in warm weather he needs blankets—for underground it is so cold in summer that a central heating system is used, and in winter the warmth of the earth is sufficient.

There generally are drills four times a week, compared with once a week before the war. Aside from that there are few restrictions except those imposed by the mere fact of living in the line. Each fort is somewhat different because each commander makes his own disciplinary rules.

Plenty of Entertainment

There are movies, radios, books and games to amuse the men, but they may attend a movie after breakfast or tune in on setting-up exercises at dinnertime, depending on their shift.

Thanks to an elaborate air-conditioning system, designed to keep out gas, they can smoke cigarets bought in the fortress canteens. These little underground stores also sell chocolate, stationery and similar items.

There are packages and letters from home, too, for the leisure hours. These, the newspapers and an occasional peep through a gunsight are the only contacts with the world "upstairs."

Half the time they do not even know what the weather is, and one of the first questions asked of an observer lucky enough to get a look outside is, "what's it like?"

Each fort is a self-contained little city, designed to hold out unaided for months in case of siege. It has its own factories, electric plant, theater, hospital, laundry, sewage system, and "street" cars.

All Have Duties

Some soldiers operate the guns, others the light plant, and others are cooks, clerks, telephone operators, laundrymen, hospital orderlies and mechanics. There is even an air-conditioning expert.

Officers have individual rooms, and a vaulted, mirror-hung mess room that has a cozy little bar, complete with footrail and leather-cushioned stools. They work in offices that resemble those of a small factory.

The troops sleep in dormitories, each containing 10 or 12 bunks in tiers. Dormitory walls are decorated with photographs of wives and sweethearts and magazine likenesses of actresses and bathing beauties.

Bathing, incidentally, is an important item in the life of the Maginot line. Because of the necessarily close contact of vast numbers of men, special emphasis has been placed on all sanitary arrangements.

There are shower rooms with hot and cold running water; steam laundries within the forts do every man's wash at least once a week; and there is an elaborate septic sewage disposal system.

Every fort has water from artesian wells drilled beneath it and reservoirs inside. A lot of water is used for cleaning, but not much for drinking — your average French soldier much prefers his daily "pinard," or red wine, for beverage purposes.

Supplies for Weeks

Each group is quartered near the gun to which it is assigned. Each unit can be isolated from the rest of its fortress in case of necessity, and has enough food and ammunition to last for weeks.

The fortresses thus are equipped for war, but as yet the war has hardly reached them. Such fighting as there has been has occurred miles in front of the line. The guns of only a few forts have entered into action, and they have fired only a few rounds at most.

MOBILE AIRPORT ON TRUCK GETS INTRODUCTION

An airport on wheels, loaded with all the mechanical equipment necessary for fixing planes in an emergency, is introduced at Newark, N. J., airport. The mobile unit, designed by Kibby-Couse of Newark, will sell for $50,000 and may prove an important factor in the European war. Several European governments have already placed orders for the unit.

STUDY IN FINANCE

Editor of The Star — "Mrs. William E. Borah, widow of the late senator from Idaho, didn't know whether she could afford the funeral trip to Idaho. She sent a secretary to check the contents of a safety deposit box which she and her husband maintained together. It contained $207,000 in $,1000 bills and government bonds."

The above article is taken from a Columbus daily paper and is whole and entire as I read it therefrom. Add to that $207,000 the $10,000 that our lawmakers see fit to give the widows of senators and other widows, it soon adds up to quite a tidy sum.

In this particular instance it leaves the recipient of the $10,000 in fairly good circumstances, from the viewpoint of Mr. Average Citizen.

Now what puzzles me, (and I presume many other persons), why give any one person $10,000 that doesn't need any more money and find a reason for not giving a few dollars to those (who through no fault of their own) are in actual want.

A body of men known as the social security board reported some time ago that they were ready to pay over to Ohio $1,388,000 that was due the state, but they were advised that the proposition should be sent through congress to make it right and regular.

That advice was lived up to and according to press and radio reports congress put their O.K. to the bill, passed it on to the President for his O.K. when, Lo and behold! He refused to sign it, giving as his reason that it established a precedent that might cause other states to take advantage of such a situation and obtain money that was not due them.

Now as congress is in regular session it seems to me that they would erect some legal barrier that would prevent such an action meeting with any success, or is congress too busy getting ready to start a filibuster against that perennial "anti-lynch" bill?

When Mr. Roosevelt stopped payment of the money that is due the state, I am under the impression that he thought congress would override his veto (for reasons best known to himself) "but he reckoned without his host" and failed to get the required two-thirds vote, thereby leaving $1,388,000 hanging in abeyance (as it were) to be kicked about from pillar to post for no telling how long.

But I'll venture to say that it may be like "the man without a country" for only a brief spell. There will be some disposition made of it if the "powers that be" have to send it down to Fort Knox in the Kentucky hills to help keep the U. S. A. out of "foreign entanglements."

This condition reminds me of an old Scotch saying which I'll quote: "The best laid plans of men and mice gang aft agley."

WOMEN TO MAKE STUDY OF DAYTIME RADIO PROGRAMS

The Women's National Radio committee announced today it will make a survey of daytime radio programs "to determine whether they entertain home women and shut-ins." The survey was prompted by many protests of listening groups, complaining of the preponderance of dramatic serials on the air and the limited number of daytime programs recognizing "the intelligence and good taste of the so-called leisure woman."

There are now more than 40 15-minute periods on NBC and CBS devoted to serials daily.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Finds Olina Has Natural Flair for Acting.

OLINA was as ready for me as Mary had been.

"I think I have them," she said as soon as I entered the room "Maman has been helping me, and I've gone through them twice now without a mistake."

"If your mother will permit us," I said, "I'll cue you now, and hear your lines."

But Queen Olga interposed quickly.

"Will you not read them over first the way you want them spoken" she asked. "My daughter is only an amateur, you know."

"That is all the more reason why I wish to hear her rendition exactly as she has conceived it," I said steadily, forbearing to add that only by so doing could I determine whether or not the girl had any natural dramatic sense of her own. Neither did I voice the opinion I had conceived that Olina was a dramatic "natural," for nothing is so cruel as a hope raised only to be dashed to the ground again

But my secret opinion was justified when I heard Olina speak the lines I had written for her. Her speaking voice was beautiful, as I knew, and while her reading of the lines was crude, amateurish, yet distinctly to be recognized in it was the dramatic spark without which no acting of a role can be made to flame.

Olina Shows Promise

She looked at me anxiously when she had finished, but she did not speak, and I knew she was remembering her mother's strictures With an unaccountable surge of compassion for the ambitious girl who had treated Mary so stubbornly, I spoke very quickly to relieve the tautness of her nerves.

"You have a natural flair for the dramatic, Olina," I told her. "I think, in time, you may go far."

"Oh!" she gasped, "thank you Does that mean—"

She stopped, embarrassed.

"It doesn't mean that you are reading these lines correctly," I told her quickly. "I shall have to drill you in them quite a bit. But you have so good a dramatic sense, and such natural timing, that I am sure we shan't have to waste much time before you have them as I want them."

"I'll try very hard," she said as humbly as a child might

"I know you will," I told her, and began at once to drill her in the lines, word by word, almost syllable by syllable, with the intonations I wished.

When I was finally satisfied, I told her so emphatically.

"I think Mr. Veritzen is going to be very pleased with this," I commented.

"Oh! but that is wonderful news," she said "If only my harp playing pleases him!"

Practice Together

"I wouldn't worry too greatly on that score," I answered "There is something more important Are you too fatigued to go with me back to Mary's room, where I can have you practice these lines together? I don't want any hitch when Mr. Veritzen hears you this afternoon."

"Oh! I'm not tired at all," she exclaimed enthusiastically. "Let's go right away! Shall we?"

"That is what I would like," I told her, and with an encouraging smile from Queen Olga, her daughter went with me out of the room and down to Mary's room

"Will Noel be there?" Olina asked in muted tones when we neared the door, and I realized that for once the young princess did not want to see the youth whose society she had been so persistently seeking Whether this was in accordance with the compulsory promise she had made me, or whether she feared to speak her lines before him in competition with what she believed to be Mary's finished and artistic rendition, I did not know, but her desire to avoid him was clear and I reassured her promptly.

Olina Surprised

"No, he will not be there," I said. "Mary is all alone and waiting for us."

"I hope she likes my rendition," she said humbly. "Of course, hers will be wonderful."

But when the rehearsal was over, and I had professed myself satisfied with the work of both of them, and had said with decision that I knew Philip Veritzen would be pleased, I caught Olina looking surreptitiously at Mary with a queer, puzzled expression which was only too plain to me, for it was the natural effect on any intelligent person after listening to the stilted, lifeless rendition which Philip Veritzen had imposed upon his daughter-in-law. And when she left us to go back to her mother and wait for the arrival of the harps, Mary struck her hands together in impotent anger.

"Did you see her?" she demanded. "You could almost hear her ask: 'Is this the newest Veritzen star?' And if that's the effect on her, what will it be on that company tomorrow? I shall be a laughing stock to them all."

GABLES FLY HOME WITH LOAD OF DUCKS

Clark Gable and Carole Lombard literally made a flying visit to Hollywood to take three dozen ducks to friends, get some fresh clothing and then take off again for Ensenada, Baja California, where they are vacationing at a gun club. The two, shown with their bag of ducks, laughed at reports that they had been lost in the wilds.

Carey Residents in Bucyrus Hospital After Accident.

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, Feb. 9—Three persons, two of whom were taken to the Bucyrus City hospital, were injured at about 9 a. m. today in an automobile crash on Route 23 three miles north of here. The accident was blamed on the slippery pavement.

Mrs. Frank D. Hurd and her brother Charles Brayton, both of Carey, were coming south when their car collided with the northbound auto of Charles W. Hansen of Upper Sandusky. Mrs. Hurd and her brother were thrown out of the car and suffered lacerations and loss of blood. Mrs. Hurd also had a back injury. After treatment by a local physician they were taken to the Bucyrus hospital in the Bringman & Co. ambulance. Mr. Hansen suffered a knee injury and was taken to his home after treatment by a physician.

DIES IN JAIL

It was reported by County Coroner M. F. Axthelm.

Coroner Althelm viewed the body at the Drake funeral home, where it was removed by W. H. Willis and Gene Geissler, deputies from the office of Sheriff Fred F. Miller. A search of the clothing did not reveal anything to establish identification.

Personal effects included $12.56, of which two $5 bills were sewed in a vest pocket, a gold band wedding ring, two pocket knives, razor, small scissors and several pencils. A receipt found in the clothing was made out to "Charles Miller," and was apparently for payment on the purchase of a pair of trousers. It was not indicated what business concern or in what city the receipt was issued.

Pencils found in the clothing bore advertising of firms located in Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Cleveland.

Fingerprints Taken

Officers today were taking fingerprints of the dead man. They will be forwarded to the Ohio and federal bureaus of identification in an effort to trace the transient. In the event that the man ever was arrested on a felony charge his prints will be on file at the bureaus, officials pointed out.

A message carrying a complete description was broadcast over the state highway patrol radio system this morning. Officials said the burial would be delayed pending efforts to establish his identity.

The complete description follows: 50 to 55 years old; five feet, fives inches in height; 140 to 150 pounds, reddish brown hair streaked with gray, medium complexion, scar on left hip apparently from burns, two circular scars on right hip, scar from an operation along the midline of the abdomen; wearing blue serge suit, red and white checked lumber jacket, blue herringbone overcoat, blue overalls over trousers, tan army-type shoes size six and light gray felt hat.

Shapiro said Stroh died of a fractured skull and a crushed chest, declaring the victim might have been kicked by an animal in the barn.

Fireworks Plant Blast Rocks Large Area in California

By The Associated Press

REDONDO BEACH, Calif., Feb. 9—Explosions so violent that people 20 miles away thought they felt an earthquake shattered a fireworks plant, but by some curious chance apparently no one was killed.

Three persons were cut by shattering glass and flying debris and a watchman was severely burned.

The first of the explosions rocked the Golden States Fireworks Co. plant, two miles from the center of this beach city, shortly before midnight.

COAST GUARD HEARS SHIPS' DISTRESS CALL

British Steamer, Sea Rambler, Reported in Trouble.

BOSTON, Feb. 9—The coast guard intercepted a distress call today from a British steamer, the Sea Rambler, which advised she had a hatch stove in and was taking water, and asked all vessels in her vicinity to stand by.

She gave her position as about 540 miles due east of St. Johns, Newfoundland. The coast guard said it heard no answering signals immediately.

Lloyd's register lists the vessel at 2,327 tons gross. She is owned by the Dover Navigation Company, Ltd.

Nothing further was heard from the Sea Rambler or from any ships which might be going to her aid, but radio men ashore said it was entirely possible that help was on the way, with radios silent because of wartime conditions.

FINLAND

heim line has been broken or Mannerheim forts have been captured are untrue," a Finnish official declared.

The Russians lost on all fronts a total of 40 tanks, the communique said, and Finnish conquests included the capture of "a powerfully manned enemy firing point" northeast of Lake Ladoga.

In central Finland, just below the country's narrow waistline where the Red army failed early in the campaign to cut the nation in two, the Finns said "our forces have improved their positions."

In the air the Finnish air force yesterday "successfully bombed" Russian motor columns and troop concentrations.

Russian spies and fighters parachuting to earth behind the Mannerheim line harrassed the Finns as they combatted Red army offensives on four fronts.

The Russians, fighting in temperatures from 15 to 40 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, failed to make important advances and in some sectors suffered heavy losses, the Finns reported.

They denied that the Mannerheim line had been penetrated.

(A Russian army communique last night said attacks on the Mannerheim line had resulted in the capture of 13 steel and concrete forts in the Hotinen and Summa areas of the Karelian isthmus. The report said "the enemy suffered great losses.")

But the parachute campaign by Russians disguised as Finnish soldiers and farmers aroused the concern of Finnish military leaders.

Several patrols of these saboteurs dropped from planes; were captured yesterday, the Finnish high command said, but added that others had caused considerable damage.

DON SLATER ANSWERS TO MURDER CHARGE

Accused of First Degree; Son, Widow Deny Guilt.

By The Associated Press

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Feb. 9—Don Slater, 18-year-old lunch room waiter, was called on today to answer a first degree murder charge that he slew his employer's husband because the man abused her.

Mrs. Minnie Jenkins, 47, and her son, Merlin, 18, pleaded innocent late yesterday to similar charges in the Feb. 1 hammer slaying of Fred Jenkins, 58. Both are held in jail in default of $50,000 and $25,000 bonds, respectively.

Prosecutor J. Ewing Smith said the mother and son would be permitted to attend funeral services for Jenkins in Sidney today under guard. Jenkins, a telegrapher, was beaten to death while asleep in his Huntsville home.

Slater's written confession said that Jenkins struck him the evening of the slaying and had threatened to kill Mrs. Jenkins, her son and a daughter, Smith reported.

Smith said he believed Mrs. Jenkins and Merlin knew Jenkins was to be killed because Slater admitted telling the woman that he was "just going to put an end to it."

He quoted Slater as saying that Mrs. Jenkins replied, "God will straighten everything out."

Slater struck Jenkins with the hammer, the confession continued, then called Mrs. Jenkins to assist him in putting the body in an automobile which Slater drove to Miamisburg, 75 miles south of here. He placed the body in a ditch, then returned and obtained Merlin's aid in disposing of Jenkins' bed, the prosecutor said.

Slater lived in the Jenkins home and worked in a lunch room operated by Mrs. Jenkins.

CAN'T CHANGE COLOR

Fruit of Peach Tree Stays Same, Expert Says.

Will white peaches on a tree which has only borne fruit three years turn yellow if the tree stands near an older one bearing yellow fruit?

An Ohioan writing to the horticulture department, Ohio State university, asks the question, stating that for two years the fruit of this tree was white, but that last season, the crop was yellow.

Frank Beach, specialist in horticulture, answers by stating that it would be as impossible for a peach to change the colors of its fruit as garden flowers such as iris, gladiolus or phlox. "I am sure," he states, "if you check up on this peach tree you will find that you are mistaken in the identity of the particular tree."

Elliott Roosevelt Opposes 3rd Term for His Father

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 — Elliott Roosevelt doesn't believe his father should run for a third term.

In answer to a question regarding a third term for the President, young Roosevelt said yesterday: "I don't know whether he will run or not. But all the jobholders want him. Personally, I think he shouldn't."

After he had addressed an Illinois Lumber and Material Dealers' association meeting, Roosevelt answered several questions from the floor concerning the country's labor organizations and leaders.

To a query as to whether he thought the "power of C.I.O. Leader John L. Lewis should be curtailed," the President's son answered:

"There is no need to curtail it. You can do it more easily by laughing him out of power."

The difference between Lewis and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, he said, is that "Green wants to run a labor union—Lewis to run the country."

SERVICES

he makes only two brief entrances, and both times he is recalled as the one who came to Jesus by night, until now we can hardly separate the night from Nicodemus!

"It is very evident that Nicodemus was at war with himself. I suspect he came to make a frank confession of the Messiahship of Jesus, but in the midst of the statement he seems to have drawn back into something safer. He would liked to have brought himself to the place where he could have called Jesus 'Christ.' He would liked to have been able to overcome the war within his own breast. He would have liked to have been able to acknowledge that simple Galilean before him as the Son of God.

"Several chapters further on he stands up in the Sanhedrin. The controversy about this Carpenter has begun to rage angrily all around. He meant to be a strong defender of the Son of God but ended with a luke warm statement.

"Nicodemus was always at war within his own soul. Why did he never come out in the open for the Master?

"First, there was the matter of his position. To have that pulling one way and the truth pulling another was not pleasant; salutations in the market place, respect, influence on this side; contempt and futility, and who knows what else on the other? And he wasn't sure in his own mind that Christ was going to win—indeed, many aren't sure yet! Unless a man comes to grips with his position in life he can never expect to really follow Christ.

What Others Think

"Then there was what others thought of the move. They had hurled it in his teeth that day in the Sanhedrin:—'Have any of the rulers or the Pharisees believed on Him?' It was a company of nobodies, this Galilean rabble—some women and a few obscure fishermen, none of the intelligentsia—people of no culture.

"Finally, Nicodemus failed to grasp the renewing power of Christ and His Spirit. He never seemed to know that in Christianity there is a 'power to become.'

"The greatest thing about Christianity is that it is a renewing—a power to become. A changing from one type of man to another. A releasing of the finest and best of our powers,—making one's personality a channel for the spirit and power of the Divine—reaching towards the highest ideals of one's soul.

Rev. Harry G. Deeds of Greenwood Evangelical church and Dr. Edward T. Waring of Epworth church offered prayer and Rev. W. E. Zimmerman of First Church of the Nazarene read the scripture lesson. Rev. J. A. Carriker of Forest Lawn Presbyterian church presided. In addition to congregational singing and music by the chorus choir, there were selections by a Calvary Evangelical church quartet composed of Elmer Harruff, LeRoy Stull, Howard Tittelbaugh and A. B. Crensap.

YOUTH GROUP TARGET OF NEW RED CHARGES

Mrs. Roosevelt and Gene Tunney Figure in Blasts.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9—The Dies committee, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Gene Tunney were among those involved today in fast-flying charges and counter-charges of "Communistic" which greeted 3,000 delegates arriving for the American youth congress.

A recent White House gathering at Mrs. Roosevelt's invitation, where a group of representatives and senators met the organization's leaders, provoked the opening barrage in the verbal warfare.

Rep. Keefe, Republican of Wisconsin told the house yesterday that 16 of the 27 Democrats at the meeting were among the 21 who had voted against continuance of the Dies committee.

"I regret," Keefe said, "that the newspapers carried the story that the First Lady of the land defends the rights of Communists in the American Youth Congress."

Rep. Pierce, Democrat of Oregon, who told the house that he attended the meeting, retorted:

"Certainly Mrs. Roosevelt appeared to be motivated solely by desire to have members of congress express themselves fully for the benefit of the young people.

"There was no debate on merits or demerits of Communism. That charge is only a peg on which to hang unfair attacks."

The house debate was followed by a statement signed by Gene Tunney and four other persons saying that the youth congress "is unduly influenced by the Communists and seeks to lead American youth into unconscious alliance with the Communist United Front."

SHOW GOES ON DESPITE BOSTON THEATER BLAZE

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Feb. 9—True to the tradition that "the show must go on," actors huddled in the wings and pleaded for quiet as firemen extinguished a small blaze in a janitor's closet backstage during last night's world premiere performance of Clifford Odet's new comedy, "Night Music."

Out front, the audience sat blissfully ignorant of the fire and wept at one of the most moving scenes of the play. Indeed, things were so serene that Publicity Man Jim Proctor slipped up to Director Harold Clurman standing in the rear of the orchestra and calmly remarked:

"Don't look now, Harold, but there's a fire backstage."

Engrossed in the action onstage, the unruffled Clurman snapped back:

"I know it; so what?"

FRENCH AND GERMANS DIE IN PATROL CLASH

BERLIN, Feb. 9—Six members of a French patrol and one German were killed, the German news agency DNB reported today, in a clash of scouts on the western front near Forbach.

The agency said the clash came unexpectedly as each patrol apparently decided to scout the same area between the lines. After several minutes of brisk rifle and machine gun fire, artillery joined the fight, it said.

TRUCK AND BICYCLE CRASH INJURES BOY

Leg Fractured in Collision on Quarry Street.

George Page, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Page of 211 Jefferson street, suffered a fractured right leg about 5:45 p. m. yesterday when the bicycle he was riding collided with a truck on Quarry street, a short distance east of North State street. His right leg was broken between the knee and hip. They described his general condition as good today.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Quarry street and the first alley east of State street when the youth rode into the side of a truck driven by W. E. Chase of 427 Cherry street. The boy, who was southbound in the alley, told witnesses he attempted to stop when he saw the truck approaching but that the bicycle skidded on the icy pavement.

The bicycle struck the left rear wheel of the truck and the impact hurled George and the bicycle several feet, witnesses said. The bicycle was badly damaged. The boy was taken to the hospital in the C. E. Curtis & Co. ambulance.

Mt. Gilead Pastor Veteran Scouter

This became our Scout home, and was in use until the building was destroyed in a wind storm several years ago.

"The boys and I had good times. We camped together, built up our own ball diamonds and carried on a busy program.

"One of the meetings that none of us will forget came on a Monday night in 1913. I spent the entire evening teaching the boys how to tie various Scout knots. The next day the peak of the 1913 flood hit Delaware and the boys, working under my direction, used those knots to tie together sections of rope that were used to rescue people from the flood waters, which stood more than eight feet in depth over the business district of Delaware. Twenty-eight lives were lost at Delaware in that flood, and the Scouts gave their full time to the rescue work."

An Extra Service

Scouting became a vital part of Rev. Rush's life by choice rather than any sense of ministerial duty. He said the Delaware gang, for example, included boys of several denominations and races, and that he never considered his Scout work as a part of his church program, although religion is a definite part of the Scout program.

"I've always liked to be with boys and work with them," Rev. Rush said. In his 30 years of Scout work he has received numerous awards and has held various titles. In the five years he has been pastor of Trinity Methodist church at Mt. Gilead he has been Scout advancement commissioner for Morrow county. At the Harding Area Scouters banquet in Marion Tuesday night he was named a member of the area council's executive board. He was scoutmaster at Delaware 20 years and served as scoutmaster at Worthington five years before moving to Mt. Gilead.

Rev. Rush was 30 years of age, was married and the father of three children when he enrolled at Ohio Wesleyan university in 1908 to study for the ministry. In spite of the sacrifices he made to get his college training, he didn't get his degree because the 1913 flood interrupted his studies in his final year of work, and in the busy months that followed he didn't feel he should drop his church and community work to return to college. "I went primarily for the training, which I received and which served me just as well as though I had the degree," he said.

Community Appreciative

Incidentally, his work in the flood emergency at Delaware and his participation in other community affairs won so much praise for him that more than 800 Delaware residents donated $1 each to buy him a new automobile—his first one—and a supply of gasoline and oil. These were presented to him at a banquet in his honor.

"Delaware people certainly were always kind to me," he said. "Whenever some one in the community would butcher a hog, I usually received part of the meat as a gift. I received other gifts of garden produce and other foods and I never remember having bought any flour. These gifts certainly made me feel like working all the harder, and went a long way to offset the modest salary I received at my Delaware church in the early years. I left a blacksmith shop that was making me a comfortable living and went to Delaware to preach at Grace Methodist church while I attended the university. I received $440 and a place to live—not a big salary for a married man with three children. The most I ever made in my 22 years at the Delaware church was $1,320 a year, but I liked the work and liked the people. I turned down some offers of more money at other churches, and wouldn't have left 10 years ago had it not been at the insistence of my superiors. I was assigned at that time to field work for the Methodist Children's home at Worthington, and for five years I helped raise money for the home."

Ashland County Native

Rev. Rush was born and reared at Hayesville in Ashland county, and received his high school education there. "When I graduated I was six feet one inch tall and weighed only 98 pounds," he said. "My doctor told me I had TB and wouldn't live long. I went to work in my father's blacksmith shop and stayed th 11 years. This work built me physically, and I've never be troubled much by sickness.

"I always was interested church work, and became act in the church league and beca Sunday school superintende When the community was without a Methodist minister made use of my local preache license and filled the pulpit. district superintendent wanted to attend a university and dev my life to the ministry, so agreed to do this if he would me a pastorate I could serve w attending college. This led Delaware."

For 21 years Rev. Rush ser without a salary as chaplain the Delaware county home, infirmary. He was allowed a sm fee for transportation, and u this money to buy a piano and up a room at the home in wh religious services were held.

During his ministry at De ware, Rev. Rush's church s out 44 preachers, 11 nurses 23 teachers in religious insti tions.

An Unusual Incident

Dozens of unusual happeni stand out in his memory. A typ incident involved a man who put off a train at Delaware cause it was believed he drunk. "I went over to the to see him and, after one look him, I told officials he was drunk but was the victim stroke of paralysis. A doctor firmed my belief. The next was to find out his name. didn't know then that the couldn't read nor writer. I out pictures of him all over county but received on respo Finally I hit on the plan of ing off a list of states to him, when I said Arkansas he je his body enough to let me k that was his home state. Ne read off the names of the c ties in that state and finally towns and thus got the nam his home town. Vocational Aptitude Tests Set For 9th Grade Pupils in County Schools

Program To Aid in Selection of Training Courses Scheduled During Coming Week.

Tests designed to help determine vocational aptitudes will be given to ninth grade students in the Marion county rural schools next week, Supt. D. T. Mills announced today.

Girls will be given three tests, the art assembly test to determine mechanical inclinations and talents, another a test to measure aptitudes for such types of work as typing, bookkeeping and general office work and another test on art appreciation. Girls will be given a manual dexterity test and the art appreciation test.

The tests will be given by senior students in the department of education at Ohio State university under the direction of Dr. Herbert A. Toops, Ohio State university expert in educational testing.

Mr. Mills said the tests are part of a broad program which will be carried out in the rural schools over a period of years to aid facing members in working out their vocational guidance problems. These vocational aptitude tests together with general intelligence tests and achievement tests will help show for what types of work students are best equipped and will assist the teachers in working out courses of study for individual students, Mr. Mills said.

Dexterity tests were given to high school students in the rural schools last year.

The schedule for the testing follows:

Monday morning, Pleasant township; Monday afternoon, Green Camp; Tuesday morning, Claridon and Kirkpatrick at Claridon; Tuesday afternoon, Caledonia and Martel at Caledonia; Wednesday morning, Meeker; Wednesday afternoon, LaRue; Thursday morning, Morral and Grand Prairie at Morral; Thursday afternoon, Agosta; Friday morning, Prospect; and Friday afternoon, Waldo.

ready for invasion of the South Russian Caucasian line are diplomatic skywriting without fire. They are so considered here because such an invasion is not feasible from a military standpoint. While a flank attack upon Russia from the Arctic and Petsamo could be sustained by short sea lines of supplies, an attack on the southern Russian or even the Balkan front would find the Allies reaching back hundreds and perhaps a thousand miles for food and ammunition. The avenues could be maintained sufficiently for demonstration or defense purposes but not enough to make attack inviting.

Incongruity

Incongruous government policies seldom are allowed to get so close to each other as at the Capitol this week. In the foreign relations room Federal Loan Administrator Jeesse Jones was favoring another loan to China which would be repaid mostly in tin and essential American war material. Across the hall not 50 feet away at the very some moment in the appropriations committee, customs chief, Basil Harris, was giving figures showing the U. S. is shipping enormous quantities of tin to Russia.

Story Of Doris Duke

How 'Richest Girl' Joined The Diplomats' Set

IN 1935 Doris was married to James Henry Robert Cromwell, a wealthy world traveler, philanthropist, and sportsman. A fabulous 'round-the-world honeymoon included a stop in Hawaii—where the Cromwells now own a $500,000 home. Today Cromwell is 43; his wife is 27.

IN 1936-40 she and her husband frequently were seen with New Deal leaders and Mrs. Cromwell made a $30,000 contribution to Democratic campaign funds. Here she's pictured with Frank Murphy, just before he went to the Supreme Court.

THIS YEAR the New Deal gave Cromwell his first government job—that of minister to Canada. Upon their arrival in Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell were met by Mackenzie King. Cromwell told the press he was for the St. Lawrence seaway and interested in social credit; he asked reporters to forget "the richest girl in the world stuff."

SOS NOT ONLY DISTRESS CALL

"SSSS" May Become Common Signal for Help Among Ships at Sea.

By International News Service

WASHINGTON—The radio call "SSSS" has entered competition with the signal "SOS" as the marine call of distress, according to the Federal Communications commission.

Although not internationally recognized as a new signal to replace the old SOS, SSSS is being used today by radio operators in the war zones.

In any event, SSSS does not officially mean "submarine sighted" or any other phrase in which the words begin with S. Neither does SOS mean officially "save our souls" or "save our ship."

Based on Speed.

All such calls are based on the speed and clarity with which they can be transmitted. The new distress call is made up of dot-dot-dot (code for S) four times repeated. The old call was dot-dot-dot, dash-dash-dash, dot-dot-dot.

In both of these there is a characteristic swing. Common understanding and usage have made them the distress signals for ships at sea, the F. C. C. reports.

There was no special wireless call for sea emergency prior to the turn of the century, according to Federal Communication commission records.

About that time the Marconi International Marine Communication Co., Ltd., began equipping ships for radio-telegraphic communication.

It designated the call CQ, which had been in use in wire telegraphy as a "general call" for many years, as the precedence signal for any ship desiring immediate communication with another ship or shore station.

The need for a universally recognized distress call was recognized at the preliminary International Radio Conference in Berlin in 1903. The Italian delegation suggested that in an emergency a ship should send at intervals the signal SSSDDD, but no action was taken.

In 1904 the British Marconi Co. instructed its ship radio stations to substitute CD for CQ. Subsequently the D was inserted in the old CQ call to make CQD, often unofficially translated as "come quick danger."

In 1906, however, at the International Radio Conference the call SOS was formally adopted. This combination was the outgrowth of a call which had been used by German ships, SOE (dot-dot-dot, dash-dash-dash, dot).

The SOE signal was unsatisfactory because the final dot was easily obliterated by interference.

Crime Costs Nation 15 Billions Each Year, FBI Speaker Tells Kiwanians

Better Trained Officers More Prevention Work Cited as Greatest Needs by Head of Cleveland Bureau.

More adequately trained law enforcement officers and an extensive crime prevention program are necessary if United States is to reduce crimes which annually cost the nation $15,000,000,000, L. W. Listerman, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office at Cleveland, declared here yesterday.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Marion Kiwanis club at Hotel Marion, Mr. Listerman contrasted the requirements for police officers 50 years ago with those for federal investigators today.

"Fifty years ago," he said, "the only requirements for a policeman were that he be fat of body, dull of mind and flat of foot. He usually was assigned to a beat and was told to do nothing and to do it well.

"Today, however, officials and the public in general have come to realize that law enforcement requires intelligence, for criminals are becoming smarter every day and law enforcement officers must keep up with them.

"Jobs" Carefully Planned

"The modern criminal plans his jobs so that weeks before he pulls a bank robbery he knows exactly how much the bank has in cash and bonds, exactly where the loot is kept and how it best can be obtained, how many employes are in the bank, how many customers enter and leave at various times of the day and how much traffic there is on all streets in the vicinity of the bank. Our modern criminal is an expert in his work and if he is to be apprehended, law enforcement officers must be experts, too."

Mr. Listerman explained the requirements for FBI agents, described the training given them and told of several of the FBI's most famous cases in recent years.

To be an FBI agent, he explained, a candidate must be between the ages of 23 and 35, must have a character and history that will stand up under strenuous and painstaking investigation, must be either a member of the bar or a certified accountant and must have at least two years' experience either as a practicing attorney or in business.

Gets Special Training

When a young man is selected as an agent, he is given four months' special training at the FBI school in Washington, D. C., and then is assigned either to the Washington headquarters or to one of the 52 branches maintained in United States and possessions.

While mentioning that all but two of the 149 kidnaping cases investigated by the FBI since 1930 have been solved, the speaker declared that the work done on kidnapings, bank robberies and other widely-publicized crimes represents only a small part of the FBI's activities. At present a considerable part of the agents' time is devoted to private investigations for the government and to investigations of espionage and sabotage. The bureau branches now receive approximately 250 complaints each day concerning attempts or plots to damage factories, he said.

He expressed the opinion that despite the trend in recent years to combat the criminal with more efficient and better trained police, crime still continues to be a major factor in American civilization. Last year, for example, there were approximately 1,500,000 major crimes such as murders, kidnapings and armed robberies while there were nearly 13,500,000 "lesser" crimes such as burglaries and auto thefts, he said.

Cites Juvenile Problem

Referring to the need for crime prevention work among children, Mr. Listerman declared nearly 20 per cent of all crimes in the country last year were committed by boys and girls under 20, and that in this age group were 12 per cent of all murderers, 29 per cent of all robbers, 43 per cent of all burglars and 49 per cent of all auto thieves.

Mr. Listerman was introduced by Zeb Stout, who presided at the meeting. Group singing was led by L. G. Jones, music supervisor in the city public schools and a new member of the club.

DESIGNERS PICK THEM AS "BEST DRESSED" IN U. S.

Alfred Vanderbilt — Angier Biddle Duke — Thomas E. Dewey — Paul V. McNutt — Lucius Beebe

Ladies, here are the "best-dressed" men in the United States, according to a selection made by the Merchant Tailors and Designers Association of America, in convention in Cleveland. Two millionaires, Alfred Vanderbilt and Angier Biddle Duke topped the list. Paul V. McNutt, presidential possibility, was selected as the "best-dressed figure in the political world." The group also included Thomas E. Dewey, also a presidential contender. National fashion honors also went to Lucius Beebe, New York columnist, and twenty others.

Your Income Tax

WHO IS HEAD OF A FAMILY?

A taxpayer, though single, who supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage, or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation, is the head of a family and entitled to the same exemption allowed a married person—$2,500. Also he may claim a $400 credit for each dependent, if such person is under 18 years of age or is by reason of advanced age or poor health (mental or physical) incapable of self-support. For example, a widower who supports in one household an aged mother and a daughter 17 years old is entitled to an exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family plus a credit of $400 for each dependent; a total of $3,300. The $400 credit, however, does not apply to the wife or husband of a taxpayer, though one may be totally dependent upon the other.

A taxpayer who supports in his home his minor children over whom he exercises family control is classified as the head of a family, even though the children may have an income of their own sufficient for their maintenance. If he does not support them, by reason of their own income, but does exercise family control, he cannot be classified as the head of a family.

If an individual supported is an adult and there rests upon the taxpayer a moral or legal obligation to provide a home and care for such individual, the exemption as the head of a family is allowed, provided the individual is financially dependent. If the individual is not financially dependent, the exemption, even though the taxpayer maintains the common home and furnishes the chief support, does not apply.

For income-tax purposes there can be only one head of a family, and the exemption cannot be divided.

It should be remembered that a single person, whether or not the head of a family, is required to file a return if his or her net income for 1939 was $1,000 or more, regardless of whether the return is non-taxable by reason of the $2,500 exemption.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

Teeth

The problem of the retention of a child's first set of teeth and the time at which these are naturally lost to make room for the permanent teeth frequently causes confusion in the minds of parents.

The loss of the temporary teeth and replacement by permanent teeth is a gradual process which starts at about six years of age and ends at approximately 12 years. The first teeth should begin to come in between the fourth and the ninth month. The two central teeth, top and bottom, come in first. The ones lateral to the central teeth come in between the age of seven and 10 months. The temporary back teeth come in at about 12 months. The sharp, canine teeth come in about 18 months, and the second permanent back teeth come in at two years.

The first permanent teeth to come in do not replace any of the temporary teeth. There are only 20 teeth in the temporary set and there are 32 in the permanent set. These first permanent molars appear behind the back of the last temporary teeth. They are often mistaken for temporary teeth and allowed to decay as if they were of no consequence. It is very important for parents to conserve these first temporary teeth because they are the keystone of the arch.

The temporary teeth are shed as a normal physiologic process. The shedding is the result of the absorption of the roots of the temporary teeth. They may be lost too soon on account of neglect or decay and this is too bad.

The central teeth are replaced by the permanent central teeth at the age of seven, the laterals at the age of eight, nine and ten, and the second molars, which do not replace temporary teeth, at the age of 12. Between the ages of 18 and 29 the wisdom teeth come in.

Harding Ready to Battle Ashland Invaders Tonight

Prexies After Second Place in NCO; Irish To Travel To Fostoria

By CHARLES HOSTETLER
Marion Star Sports Editor

SCHOLASTIC basketball tonight reaches the peak of activity for the 1940 season, schedules tapering off to their climax before quintets begin tournament competition.

Marion Harding returns to the home court for the first time since mid-January to play host at the Marion Steam Shovel court to Ashland High. The Presidents will seek to turn back the invading A's, thereby gaining a measure of revenge for an earlier loss and moving into undisputed second place in the North Central Ohio conference.

Mt. Vernon Yellow Jackets, still unbeaten and leading the pennant chase, are expected to add their eighth consecutive league win at the expense of Bucyrus. Galion visits Shelby in the duel that rounds out the NCO card.

Irish at Fostoria

Marion St. Mary carries its fight for League of Six Nations honors to the home lot of Fostoria St. Wendelin. The Saints played but one game last week, romping over Ashley of Delaware county. They faced a strenuous practice schedule this week but took long scrimmage sessions in stride and are in top form for tonight's road journey.

County teams will be active in the final round of league warfare. Titles in both divisions already have been sewed up and tonight's matches will be little more than a tune-up for next week's tournament play. Claridon, 1940 title-winner, travels to Pleasant Township to engage last year's crownwearers in one of the outstanding games.

Coach A. B. Augenstein's pennant-holders will be shooting for their eleventh win to wind up the schedule without a league defeat. Kirkpatrick, unbeaten feminine champs, are expected to have little difficulty in annexing their tenth win at Martel. Their hosts have failed to win any in eight starts.

County Schedule

The complete county league schedule is Claridon at Pleasant, Kirkpatrick at Martel, Morral at Agosta, Green Camp at Prospect, Caledonia at LaRue, Meeker at Waldo. Morral boys tackle Brown Township of Delaware county, while the Morral girls entertain McCutchenville of Wyandot county, in the final home appearance of the Morral teams.

Jump's Hat Shop girls' team will seek their fifteenth consecutive victory in a preliminary. Arrangements for the prelim have not yet been completed.

Mt. Vernon's Shellmar team comes here with a record of 18 wins in 20 starts. Their line-up includes Bob Beckwith, former Yale star, Henry Seback, once of Kenyon college and Bob Tavener, who starred at Ohio Wesleyan.

Fremont Team To Sell Stock

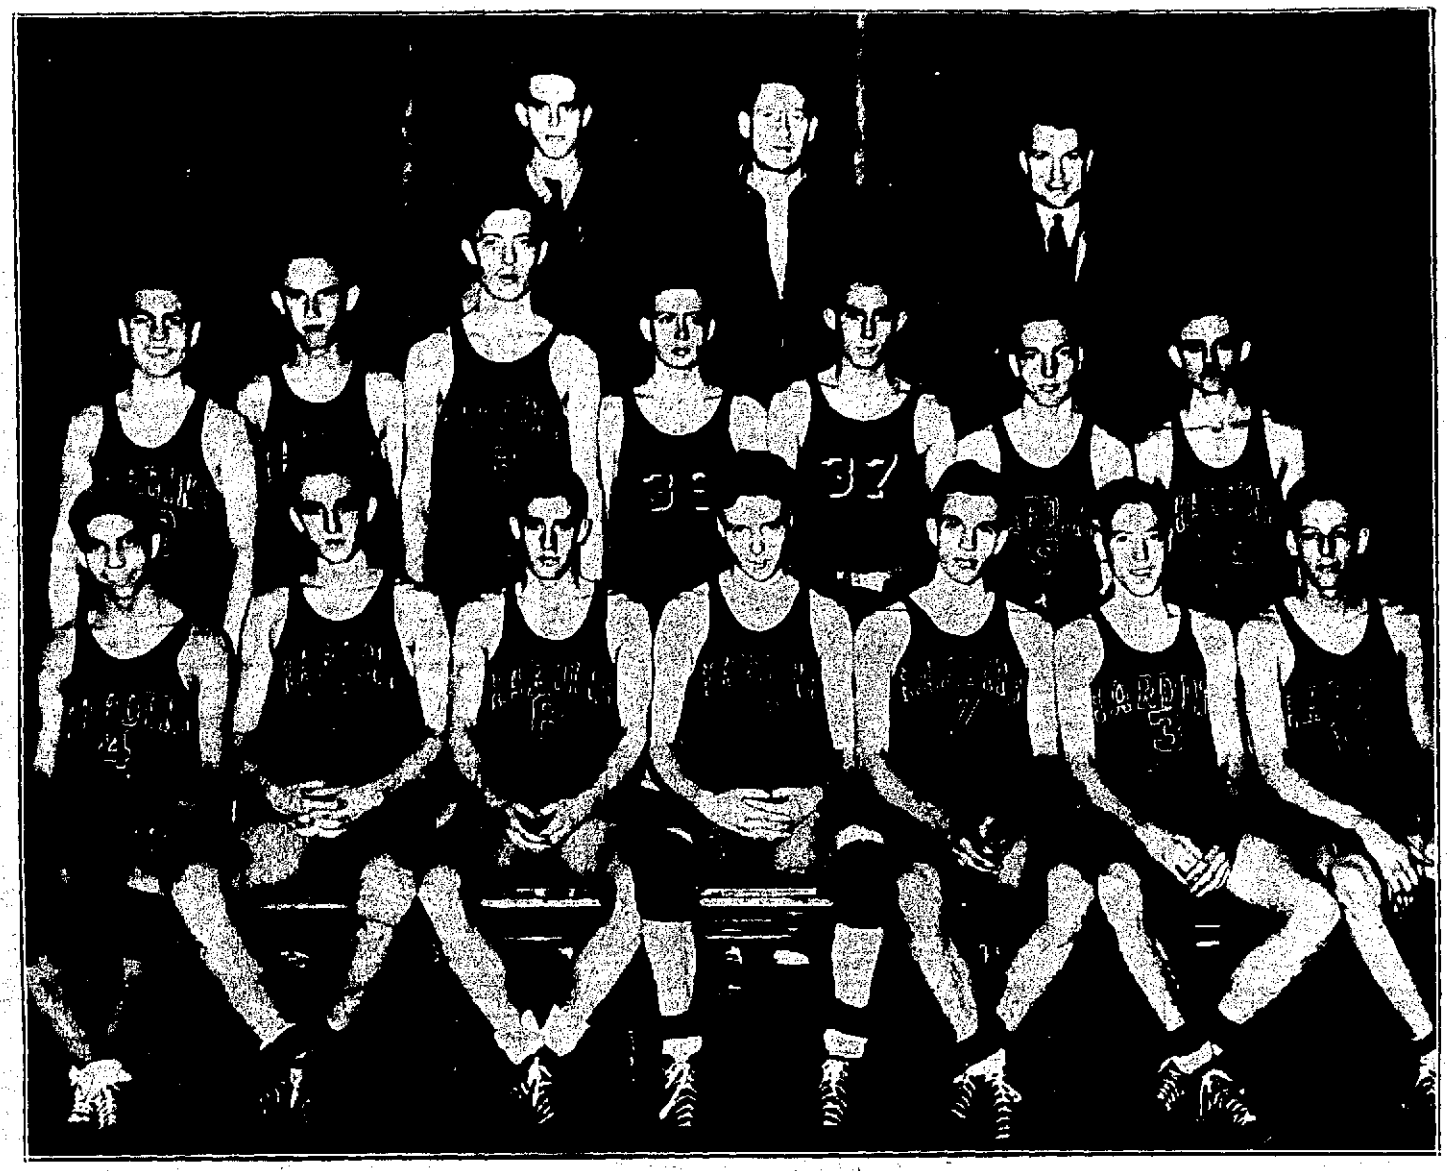
FREMONT, O., Feb. 9—The future of organized baseball here was put up to the fans today.

Robert Recterwald, president of the Fremont club of the Ohio State league, said $3,600 in common stock must be sold within two weeks to clear up standing debts.

"If the stock sale fails, organized baseball in Fremont will also fail," he declared.

Godoy Slated to Stand up for 6 or 7 Rounds With Joe Tonight

Meet the 1940 Prexies — Up Near the Top



Marion Harding's basketball combine, which tonight seeks to take over second place in the North Central Ohio conference by turning back the invading Ashland High quintet, is pictured above. Front row, left to right—Isadore Birnbaum, Johnny Roberts, Russell Reichardt, Andy Irvine, Dale Hudson, Earl Johnson, George Hedge. Second row, left to right—Jack Houpt, Marvin Coulter, Charles Smith, Grant Mousor III, Robert Roberts, Paul Schwemley, Ron Stull. Back row, left to right—Loren Tibbals, manager; Coach Bohyer, Assistant Williams.

Four Furious Feudists Billed for Team Battle on Mat Here

Rayburn, Hagen, Williams and Angelo To Resume Dispute for Pleasure of Fans.

Something close to the answer of a wrestling fan's dream will be offered local mat-goers during Monday's wrestling show at the Marion Steam Shovel arena.

A quartet which last week engaged in an impromptu battle royal, Al Williams—Billy Rayburn against Martino Angelo—and Jack Hagen, have been signed by local promoters for a team match.

Booking of the team scrap makes legal the mayhem which the duos attempted to commit at each other's expense last Monday. The melee came as the curtain rang down on the scheduled 10-round slugfest between Williams and Angelo.

Second Aids Pal

Rayburn, second for the Chicagoan, leaped into the ring when Williams was pummeled all over the canvas by Angelo's flying fists. Williams had been handed the bout midway in the fifth when Referee Tom Temple disqualified Angelo for a low blow.

Rayburn's efforts to help his buddy drew Jack Hagen, Angelo's second, into the fray. Events transpired lightning-quick in the next few minutes with the quartet resorting to good old back alley tactics while Referee Temple tried to stop the brawl.

When the four enter the squared circle, Rayburn and Hagen will be clad in regulation trunks, instead of doing battle in civilian clothes as they did last week. In the team scrap each member of either duo must be floored twice to constitute a fall. The time limit of the melee will be 90 minutes.

Hager vs. LaCrosse

Young Tex Hager, the bronco-busting Oregonian, returns to trade grips with Gil LaCrosse of Boston, in a special one-hour preliminary. Hager won the front rank billing with his conquest of George Wagner of Houston, Tex., last week. It is the Bostonian's first visit here in 1940, yet there are but few fans who can't recall Gil's hulking form.

Anything but even tempered in the ring, Gil has won some mighty scraps on the local canvas. His bout with Hager will open the card at 8:30.

Louis Heavy Favorite To Keep His Crown Against Chilean.

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—Along about 10:30 tonight, unless all signs are screwy, Joe Louis will be ready to sit down to his first fried chicken in six weeks, still heavyweight champion of the world.

That gives him half an hour, or approximately seven rounds of his scheduled 15-round title go with Arturo Godoy, the Chilean challenger, which is slated to get under way at 10 p. m. (Marion time) in Madison Square Garden before a crowd of more than 18,000. And not even Arturo's relatives down there in Iquique think the Brown Bomber will need any more than that to dispose of this ninth aspirant to his heavyweight throne.

Could Make History

Arturo of the Andes could make fistic history by taking the crown away from the dusky one-man wrecking crew, but so could the statue of Billie Penn dive off the top of Philadelphia's city hall into the Delaware river. That's about as much chance as the boys and girls are giving the rough, tough Godoy and his South American way.

The odds-layers still were holding Louis a 1 to 7 favorite today, but if you had any folding money to put on 27-year-old Arturo's nose, you could get almost any price you named.

Godoy's best chance appeared to be in staying in a crouch and crowding in close as long as possible. Because, just as sure as it happened to Tony Galento and Paulino Uzcudun before him, as soon as Arturo comes out of the shell to take a peak at what's happening, there's going to be a slight explosion—right on the end of his chin.

Remembering from Godoy's previous United States invasion a couple of years back that he is a better - than - average body puncher and considerably more adept in the crouching, bobbing, crowding style than is Two-Ton Tony, this corner figures the Chilean fisherman can stick around for a while. He's going to get curious along about the sixth round. He'll come to the surface, and any time after the fifth ends, so will Arturo's challenge, this corner believes.

Will Get Plenty

As usual, Louis isn't doing his work for nothing.

The greatest box office attraction since Dempsey, will lure some 16,000 to 19,000 into paying about $110,000 to see him roll out his artillery.

Of this, Louis is to receive 40 per cent, less taxes, or about $40,000, thereby boosting his ring earnings in the five years since he started to punch for pay to more than $1,700,000. Godoy figures to pick up about $17,500 along with a sore chin and, probably, assorted aches and pains.

Special to The Star

Local leaders feel confident that the firm will rebuild, pointing to the stock subscription that has been offered by interested individuals and firms, and to this city's rail and highway facilities

WOOSTER CLIMBS UP BY BEATING PRINCES

Scots Close on Heels of Muskingum Leaders.

By The Associated Press

Wooster college's Scots furnished the big news on the state basketball front today.

They walloped Heidelberg, 70 to 23, in the headliner of last night's 10-game program to advance within a half game of Muskingum, leading the Ohio conference race with eight consecutive victories.

In addition to its seventh straight league victory, the triumph gave Wooster a record of 10 and 2 in statewide play. Miami tops the all-inclusive standings with 11 and 1.

Wittenberg tripped Findlay, 49 to 43, in another conference tussle. The Lutherans, paced by Cliff Heskett with 19 points, were ahead at intermission, 29 to 22.

Toledo suffered its fourth setback in 23 starts in losing to George Washington, 47 to 37. The lead changed hands seven times in the first 20 minutes.

Ohio university stopped Marietta, 52 to 28, Kent State tripped Akron, 33 to 27; Mansfield (Pa.) Teachers nosed out Ashland, 31 to 29; Wilmington turned back Morehead of Kentucky, 29 to 27; Lawrence Tech of Detroit shaded Duke school of Cleveland, 45 to 44, Penn beat Alliance college of Pennsylvania, 31 to 26; and Westminister downed Youngstown, 44 to 37.

Ohio U's victory was its 12th in 16 games and marked Marietta's 10th setback in 13 contests. Kent State gained revenge for an earlier trimming by whipping Akron.

List Already at 135 Teams for March Meet

Ohio's annual Inter-City bowling tournament, which opens here next month at the Marion Recreation Center, is expected to set a new attendance record, Rex Miller of Marion, secretary of the meet, reported today.

Already 135 teams from scattered sections of the state have filed reservations and as many more are expected to submit registrations before the Feb. 16 deadline, Secretary Miller reported. The present entry list does not include teams from Marion, Lima, Sandusky and Lorain, which alone probably will account for more than 100.

The previous entry list record was posted in 1937 when 251 teams participated in the tourney at Tiffin. Last year at Findlay the list asme within 20 of cracking the all-time mark.

Officials of the Inter-City association will convene here at Hotel Harding, Feb. 16 to prepare the schedule. Bowling will begin March 2 and continue over nine or 10 week-ends. Visiting bowlers will roll team matches Saturday afternoon and night with singles and doubles booked Sunday.

Lima, Sandusky and Lorain are the three most prominent bidders for the 1941 meet. Each city is permitted to cast ballots equal to the number of teams entered and naturally those angling for next year's tourney are interested in sending as many as possible.

There will be approximately 30 local teams competing, most of which will roll games on the inaugural week-end. Nearby cities already represented among the entries include Galion, Wooster, Fremont, Orrville, Mt. Vernon, Marysville, Sandusky, Piqua, Upper Sandusky, Elyria, Delaware and Massillon.

106 ATHLETES AT O. S. U. GIVEN HELP WITH JOBS

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 9—One hundred and six Ohio State university athletes average about $40 monthly from part-time jobs but none receives scholarship or tuition aid.

The university has a total of 947 athletes including freshmen, its athletic department informed John L. Griffith, Western Conference athletic commissioner, in a report on aid to athletes required of Big Ten schools

$25,000 Smile

This isn't Joe Di Maggio or any of the other big league stars signing for $25,000, but Roy Cullenbine, former Detroit Tigers' utility outfielder, putting his John Hancock on a Brooklyn Dodgers contract for that amount. It's a bonus for signing. Cullenbine was one of the players made free agents by Judge Landis several weeks ago.

Dizzy Dean Goes To Chicago; Due To Sign Again

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Feb. 9—The 1940 edition of Jerome Herman "Dizzy" Dean, who steamed off pounds—15 of them—instead of words this winter, comes to town today in the interest of baseball.

That could well mean his own interests for he has yet to sign a Chicago Cub contract. Ostensibly, however, his visit will be in line of duty for a Mississippi baseball school with which he is connected.

The Cub hurler will chaperon a group of baseball pupils from Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan to the south Monday on a "Dizzy Dean special."

When P. K. Wrigley learned of Dean's impending arrival, the Cub owner said

"That's fine. Maybe I'll get a chance to see him."

Diz, who collected $41,000 for winning 13 games in the last two years (seven in 1938 and six last year), has expressed little desire to toil for $10,000 a year, his original 1940 contract

It is believed his 1940 agreement, when signed, will fix Dean's salary at $12,000 or $15,000

Blood Runs Cold

By Ann Demarest

YESTERDAY: The murder story in front paged in the newspapers because Joan's father also died a violent death. Mary Ann tells Chrisine that Adriane is terribly upset about something.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Tim Lathrop

MRS. EVANS, attired in a flagrantly red and very unbecoming coolie coat, was at the top of the stairway glaring down at the very flushed and perspiring Sergeant Long. He was limping up to the second floor swearing at the top of his lungs. It seems that he had come back from the hospital and was on his way to Joan's room to poke around a little more. At the top of the stairs he caught his heel on the brass rim of the step and fell the whole flight.

I was surprised that he hadn't broken his neck, because he was a very heavy man. His ankle was wrenched badly, though, but that didn't prevent him from buttonholing a man who was coming up the stairway. I had to look twice and then I wouldn't have recognized Mr. Whitefield if it hadn't been for the heavy coat. He was the sort of man you could meet every day and never recognize.

"Just a minute there." He caught Whitefield by the arm as he came up to the hall. "There's something I'd like to ask you."

"Why, Sergeant," the man said with mock politeness as he took off his hat, "you told me I could go out this evening."

"I know that," the Sergeant growled. "What I want to know is, why didn't you tell me about that quarrel Miss Wells had in the hall with that man Kincaid? She left your apartment to see him."

"I tell you I don't know about any quarrel," Whitefield said. "What goes on here is none of my business." He swung past the Sergeant and proceeded up to the third floor.

Apparently the Sergeant's ankle was bothering him, so he didn't stop the artist. I propelled the officer into my room. Mrs. Evans departed with a disapproving snort after asking why he hadn't arrested Mr. Kimball and why wasn't there a police guard outside of her door, since she undoubtedly be the next one to go.

"And if you haven't arrested Mr. Kimball," she called back as she waddled off, "I'd like to know what the delay is all about."

The Sergeant closed the door none too quietly. "That woman is going to drive me out of my mind. She acted so funny about her work when I asked her. Do you know what it is? She sells corsets, goes from door to door!"

I wanted to laugh, but I was afraid he'd arrest me for making game of the law. Mary Ann, however, perched on the arm of a chair by the fireplace, giggled and the Sergeant, as susceptible as Direk to red hair, smiled grudgingly.

"Lathrop and Kolff will be here pretty soon," he said as I brought out some adhesive for his foot.

I was surprised that Tim Lathrop could leave the hospital. "Did you find out how it happened?"

He grimaced as he tried to pull his heavy shoe off his swollen foot, and didn't reply immediately. After a moment of grunting as he bound his ankle he said, "All I know is he was pulled out of the water at the foot of Forty-second Street and the East River.

"It seems a policeman saw a car driven by a women going toward the wharf," he went on. "Then a minute later he heard a loud splash. He hurried down, but couldn't see anything. It's a dead-end street and runs directly into the river, so he knew the car was submerged. He leaned over the edge of the wharf and lighted the water with his flash. A man was struggling to the surface." The Sergeant paused while pulled on his sock and shot. "It was Lathrop," he said finally, "but he was unconscious and when the officer got him out he couldn't leave him that way to search for the woman. He signalled for help and when the police car came they found the woman's body, but she was pretty nearly done for. They don't expect her to live. I saw her for a minute, but I couldn't question her."

I shivered. It was horrible to think of those people almost drowning last night when it was so bitter cold.

'Open!'

"It's got me all mixed up, I can tell you that," the Sergeant continued almost as though he were thinking aloud. "I could have sworn that Lathrop was trying to get rid of his wife, but now it looks as though she was trying to drown herself and him, too, since she was driving the car. She was one of those neurotic women. And even though they weren't living together she was still jealous of him and hated Joan Kent."

"Then she couldn't have known that Joan was dead," I suggested, "because if it was jealousy there wouldn't have been any reason for her to try to drown him with Joan out of the way."

"H'm," he said. "That's right." He lighted a cigar and smoked in silence for a moment. Then he leaned forward. "But here's something. Maybe she killed Joan and then was afraid she might get caught. So she decided to kill herself and her husband, too."

I shook my head. It didn't sound logical to me.

"Oh, Sergeant, I forgot to tell you something," Mary Ann said excitedly. "Last night a friend of mine, a girl, dropped in. She lives in the next block. She rang the bell downstairs and when there was no answer, tried the street door and it was open."

"Open!" The Sergeant sat up. "I thought it was always kept locked."

Mary Ann nodded. "It is, or at least it's supposed to be. And when I came home after twelve it was locked. Anyway, Kitty came upstairs and left a note for me, but I forgot all about it until this evening, so I called her."

"Did she know anything?"

"I asked her and she said that when she was walking down the hall on this floor she saw a woman come out of Joan Kent's apartment."

"What time did you say that was?"

"A little before eleven. She'd been to the movies and dropped in on her way home, so she was pretty certain about the time. The main picture was over about twenty-five of eleven."

The Sergeant groaned and then leaned back in the chair. "I don't suppose she could describe the woman."

"She couldn't remember much about her except that she was tall and dark."

"That sounds like Mrs. Lathrop," the Sergeant said moodily, "but it sounds like two million other women in New York, too. She was here before eleven, I think, and was found after midnight in the river. In the meantime her husband was here, but he didn't stay very long."

He leaned forward and his eyes were resting thoughtfully on the fire. "What could she have been doing in the meantime and where did she and her husband meet up?" he mused.

Then he jerked his head up and said in a harsh voice, "With that street door open, anyone could have come in and done it."

A Handsome Man

Suddenly the room seemed hot and close with the pungent scent of wood burning. And I had a queer frightening sensation when I realized that last night the street door had been unlocked. Mary Ann was staring at the Sergeant, her hands clenched in her lap.

"Do you — do you suppose—?" The words choked in her throat. She looked frightened.

She didn't have time to finish whatever it was she was trying to say, because Direk leaned in the open doorway then, and asked if he could come in. There was a man standing behind him in the hall.

"Sure, come in." The Sergeant got up and limped around, trying his foot gingerly. "Hello, Lathrop."

For some reason I'd pictured Tim Lathrop as thin and pallid, a little down at the heel, with a flowing tie and hair. It was quite a shock to find him as different from that as you could imagine. He was pale, but shock and submersion accounted for that. From his right eye well back over his thick brown hair he was bandaged. And even that didn't detract from his good looks. He was one of the handsomest men I've ever seen.

When Direk introduced us, though, Tim Lathrop spoke almost listlessly. His voice was low and held an unexpected warmth penetrating. Mary Ann, I noticed, was all of a-flutter over him.

"I got part of your story from the officer," the Sergeant said, "but I want to hear it from you. When did you meet your wife last night?"

He faced Tim Lathrop, who had seated himself on the low stool close to the fireplace. And Direk sat down on the arm of my chair.

Tim Lathrop started haltingly, as though he were having a difficult time gathering his thoughts.

"When I left the house, Louise, my wife, was waiting for me. Her car was parked a few doors down the street in front of the laundry. When she got out of the car and came towards me I could see that she was upset about something. I had to get into the car to avoid a scene because the minute she laid eyes on me she started to quarrel. She was raving—a mad woman," he paused and his eyes sought the Sergeant's wretchedly.

It must have been hard for him to talk before all of us. After all, even though he had been separated from her, she was still his wife, and he seemed a pretty sensitive person.

"What time did you leave the house?" the Sergeant asked.

"It must have been about half-past eleven. You see I left the shop, thinking I'd go back to the hotel, and then I decided to go up to see Richard, so I came in the house door and went upstairs."

PEP UP WITH VITAMIN B
You'll feel better, work better, sleep better when your system gets enough Vitamin B. Tablets of Brewer's Yeast and Wheatamin provide this necessary food in pleasant, highly concentrated form. One tablet contains as much Vitamin B as 4 average moist yeast cakes. Chew a couple at mealtime and feel the years roll off! Ask for "Facts about Vitamins."
